A PERSONAL WORD

My father had some old records in his possession which came to him from his father. These were yellow with age and falling to pieces. In another generation they would probably have been lost. In looking these records over the thought came to me: "How can these be saved?" It was then that the present history was begun, with no hope or prospect of pecuniary reward, but with the desire of preserving to our children the records of their fathers.

In a work of this character must necessarily occur many omissions and inaccuracies, for which indulgence is asked. It will be observed that more space and fuller details are given in regard to certain persons than to others. This is due chiefly to a desire to bring into prominence some of those strong men whose characteristics have given direction and distinctiveness to succeeding generations of the family. It is due in part also to the fact that some of the pioneers took pleasure in writing their experiences in diaries or in publishing reminiscences in the local newspapers of their day, and these records have been in part preserved and freely drawn upon in this history. These diaries and recollections are doubly valuable because they not only reveal the character of the men who wrote them, but they also convey a vivid picture of the manner of life and customs and hardships of the people among whom they lived.

Of those now living some wrote freely in answer to inquiries, taking great interest in the progress of the history; others sent the briefest facts. Where lines have not been followed out it is because knowledge concerning them could not be obtained, but all branches have been given as fully as the available information made possible. Five years have been spent in correspondence with the representatives of the various branches wherever a trace of them could be obtained. Visits have been made to the older members of the family, national and state archives have been searched, and information has been gathered from every possible source.

The first impetus to this work, aside from the papers left by my father, was given me by Edwin J. Vawter, of Ocean Park, California, who had been carefully gathering and preserving information for years. The discovery of the coat of arms in that branch of the Valletort family from which we are directly descended is due to Miss Emma Vawter, of Santa Monica, California. The first trace of the family of Richard Vawter, son of Philemon, was found after great effort by Charles P. Vawter, of Lexington, Kentucky. Milton Vawter, of North Madison, Indiana, who is an authority on the family history, has given much valuable information.

So many others have been actively helpful in the collection of this great body of material from every part of the country that I despair of expressing to them individually my gratitude and appreciation. But I am consoled in this omission by the certainty that every one of them will feel amply repaid by the knowledge that he or she has contributed to the completeness and accuracy of this record.

The Vawter family of the early days was of a deeply religious nature. The members in Virginia were Episcopalians. Jesse and Philemon united with the Baptist Church. Jesse himself and a number of his descendants have been Baptist ministers. Philemon was also a Baptist minister. Beverly, a son of Philemon, became a Christian minister and in his line are many ministers of the same denomination.

David, the father of Jesse and Philemon, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Jesse also enlisted and served a few months. Some reports, not fully authenticated, state that Philemon enlisted, but his extreme youth at that time lends color to doubt upon this point. Many of the descendants of Jesse and Philemon served in the Civil War, the descendants of Jesse being entirely on the Union side, and of those of Philemon some were in the Union and some members of the Confederate Army. The family was generally strongly opposed to slavery, but a few were slaveholders.

The Vawters have not, as a rule, been prominent in public life, though several of them have been influential members of the Indiana legislature.

The descendants of Jesse Vawter number one thousand five hundred and twenty-seven direct and five hundred and thirty-five related by marriage into the direct line. The descendants of Philemon number one thousand sixty-six direct and three hundred and fifty related by marriage into the direct line. The number of children of Jesse and Philemon were eighteen; grandchildren, one hundred and forty-three; great-grandchildren, five hundred and sixty-nine; great-great-grandchildren, one thousand one hundred and sixty-three; great-great-great-grandchildren to this date, six hundred and ninety-three. The total number named in this record, including the families of Edward and Russell Vawter, which are not at all complete, are two thousand seven hundred and eighty-two direct and nine hundred and forty by marriage into the direct line, making three thousand seven hundred and twenty-two in all.

Fresh from a close and extended study of the history of this family, the conviction is strong within me that it tells the simple story of sturdy courage, honest living, citizenship unpretentious, yet shrinking not from the citizen's responsibilities; the story of very human endurance, not without faults, but measuring up fully to the hope expressed by one of the living members of the family, who, with the wisdom of almost four-score years, wrote:

“You are putting great labor on that tree. It must be large, with many branches heavy with fruitage. But how about the fruit? Would all pass inspection as first or second, or even third class? In so large a tree, so old and of such wide-spreading branches, there must be some knotty, some bad at core, some worm-eaten. Let us be glad if in the main it is marketable.”

VALLETORT

THE NAME FROM WHICH VAWTER WAS DERIVED

NAME

In the seventeenth century, about the year 1685, three brothers came from England, probably from near Plymouth, to Virginia. These men were John, Bartholomew and Angus Vawter. Some members of the family think that the name has come from the French name Vautier or Vautié. While this name sounds or rather looks more like Vawter, it is probable that our name has come from the French name Valletort, which is pronounced Vă-yě-tor.

In the "Virginia Cousins," by C. Brown Goode, p. 460, we find the following:

"The barony of Harberton, granted to the family of de Valletort in the time of King Henry I, became extinct about 1307. The name has since become known as Vaulter." (It is also given in English records as Vawter.)

From 1100-1300, the line of descent in the Valletort family, as given in the "Virginia Cousins," is as follows:

1. Reginald de Valletort, Lord of Harberton.
2. Roger de Valletort, living in 1108.
3. Ralphe de Valletort, living in 1168.
4. Joel de Valletort, of Tawton, married Emma, daughter of Sir William Botreaux.
5. Sir Philip de Valletort, living in 1230.
6. Sir John de Valletort, living in 1250.

Lord Harberton, the first Valletort of whom we have a record, lived in England in the time of Henry I. The name began to change in spelling about 1300 and, in 1637, we have a record in Plymouth, England, which gives the name as Vawter and shows that the name had been Valletort. It seems that at that time the name was sometimes written Vawter and sometimes Vaulter.

When the Vawter brothers first came to Virginia, the name was usually written Vawlter or Vaulter (see reminiscences of Col. John Vawter, p. 24. The l was afterwards dropped and the name was variously written as Vauter, Vauters (see revolutionary war record of David Vauters, p. 8), Vaughter (see marriage license granted Jesse Vawter, foot note, p. 11), and Vawter. The descendants of John, Bartholomew and Angus Vawter now, we believe, uniformly spell the name V-a-w-t-e-r.

In a book, entitled "The Plymouth Armada Heroes," by Mary W. S. Hawkins, is this account:

"In 1544, William Hawkins purchased the Manor of Sutton Valletort or Vawter of Sir Hugh Pollard for (1000) one thousand marks."

In the genealogical table of the Hawkins family, same book, the above William Hawkins is designated as the Lord of the Manor of Valletort. It appears, p. 162, that the manor was sold in the year 1637-8 by the grandson of Sir John to the city of Plymouth. In the records (Received Accounts), there appears this: "Item: for a present given Mr. Risdon to procure out of his hands such writings as concerned Vauter's Fee, lately bought by the town of Mr. John Hawkyms, and a man and two horses two journeys to fetch said writings."

"It is easy to see," said General Hawkins of Indianapolis, Indiana, "how Valletort could be corrupted into Vauter or Vawter. The double l being mouillé and the final t not pronounced. As it required two horses two journeys to carry the load of records pertaining to the property, it is probable that they go back very far and contain valuable Valletort (Vawter) history."

The coat of arms which belonged to this branch of the Valletort or Vawter family is described in the "Virginia Cousins" as follows:

"Arms: Gules three bends, argent, on a border sable, ten plates, or: or three bends gules within a border sable, bezanty."

In an article in the Encyclopedia Britannica on "Plymouth" we find the following paragraph: "In Domesday, Sutton Manor occurs as Sutone and afterwards, it was divided into the town of Sutton Prior, the hamlet of Sutton Valletort and the tithing of Sutton Ralphe—a part of it having been granted to the Norman family of Valletort, while the greater part belonged to the priory of Plymouth."

Judging from the evidence before us, our ancestors were of Norman origin and came to this country from near Plymouth, England, about the year 1685.

THE EARLY VAWTERS

This record begins with John,* Bartholomew and Angus Vawter, who came to Virginia from England (probably from near Plymouth) about the year 1685. We are descended from John.

Nothing is known of the first John, except that he had children and one of them was named John. Of this second John, we find in an old Virginia record (a copy of which is in the William and Mary Quarterly, vol. 5, p. 90) that, in 1737, John Vawter was appointed administrator of the estate of James Jamieson of Essex county, Virginia. There was also an Edward in the second generation, but it is not certain whether he was the son of John, Bartholomew or Angus.

John, the second, was married, probably to a Beverly. The Beverlys were famous in the early times in Virginia. Robert Beverly wrote a history of Virginia in 1705, which was published in England in 1722. It is a very rare and valuable work now, one of the original copies in the Newberry Library at Chicago being valued at many hundreds of dollars. Robert Beverly lived in Essex county, Virginia. There are also other noted Beverlys who are mentioned in histories of Virginia. There are sketches of the Beverly family in the book "Lee of Virginia," by Edmund Jennings Lee, and in the bound volumes of the William and Mary Quarterly of Virginia.

The probability of the wife of the second John having been a Beverly comes from the fact that one of her sons was named Beverly, and it was then, as now, a common thing for a son to be given the family name of his mother. The name Beverly runs through all branches of the family and this seems to have been its first appearance.

*In the Virginia Historical Magazine, vol. 7, p. 300, is a copy of an old Virginia record which gives the date of inventory or probate of will of Bartholomew Vawter in Essex county, in 1717, which shows that Bartholomew, the first, died in 1717. In a list of things appraised is a "parcel of old books at 15s."

The children of John, the second, were: Bartholomew, Angus, Richard, Beverly, David (born in 1720), Margaret and Winifred.

Beverly, son of John second, married ——— ———.

Children:

1. Beverly, killed in the Revolutionary War.

2. ———, who married Mr. Hill.

*3. Alpha, who married Robert Shelton. Their children were: Smedley, who married his cousin, Melinda White.

4. Nancy, who married a Wilhite. Children were: Nancy, Melinda, Ely, Elliott, Anne. Nancy married, second, a Mr. Hawkins.

5. Anne, who married her cousin Philemon Vawter.

David, son of John, the second, was married to Mary Rucker in Culpeper county, Virginia. It is believed by some of the family that the wife of David Vawter was Mary Beverly and not Mary Rucker. Our authority for believing the name to be Rucker is that John Vawter, a grandson of David and Mary, in an account of his life, said that the maiden name of his grandmother was Mary Rucker and that, after the death of David Vawter, she married a Rentfrow (see p. 25). The name of Beverly seems to have come into the family back of David, as one of David's brothers was named Beverly.

Little is known of David Vawter, except that he was born in 1720; was an Episcopalian; served in the Revolutionary War; lived in Culpeper county, Virginia, and had six children. That David Vawter was in the Revolutionary War is shown by the following, which was copied from the Virginia Magazine of History and Biography (1893-1894).

"A Muster Roll of Captain Ambrose Madison's Company of Foot in the Regiment of Volunteer Guards at the Barracks in Albemarle county, where Francis Taylor, Esq., is Commander to June 1, 1779.

"Privates.

"David Vawter, enlisted January 17, 1779. Discharged June 1, 1779."

David Vawter lived in Culpeper county and enlisted in Albemarle county, which is the adjoining county. Culpeper county at that time included what is now known as Madison and ~~Orange~~ counties. It was in the part now called Orange county that David Vawter lived.

A communication received from the Military Secretary of the War Department at Washington says: "The name David Vawter, nor the name Jesse Vawter has been found on the rolls in this office. It is shown by the records, however, that one David Vauters served as a private in Captain John Camp's Company in the First Virginia State Regiment, commanded by Colonel George Gibson. He enlisted March 1, 1777, to serve three years, and his name last appears on the company muster roll for February, 1778. The date of his separation from the service is not stated."

There is no doubt but this is the same David Vawter, as many of the Vawters at that time spelled the name V-a-u-t-e-r. Even if the name had been given as V-a-w-t-e-r, it might have easily been written down as V-a-u-t-e-r-s. The name is often called Vauters to this day, by those who do not know the spelling.

The time of the second enlistment (which was mentioned first) does not at all overlap the time of the first, and both together do not quite fill out the time for which the first enlistment was made.

The children of David and Mary (Rucker) Vawter were: Jesse, Philemon, William, Winifred, Margaret and Mary.

The descendants of Jesse and Philemon will be given later.

William Vawter, son of David, was married and had a son, Lewis, who lived in North Carolina. It is not known where William Vawter lived. It may have been that he came to Kentucky later than Jesse and Philemon. In the records of Fayette county are found these items:

"1st. William Vawter and Mary, his wife, sold a tract (169 acres) of land in Jessamine county, Kentucky, in 1803.

"2d. William Vawter and his wife, Mary, sold five hundred acres in Campbell county, Kentucky, in 1805.

"3d. William Vawter and his wife, Mary, sold 1000 acres in

*W. G. Stanard, the Corresponding Secretary and Librarian of the Virginia Historical Society of Richmond, Virginia, will, for a consideration, give a certified statement of the record of David Vawter.

Gallatin county, Kentucky, in 1809. They lived at that time in Woodford county, Kentucky."

Philemon Vawter lived in Woodford county, Kentucky, and Elliott Vawter, son of Philemon, lived at one time in Gallatin county, Kentucky. This William Vawter, if not a brother of Jesse and Philemon, must have been closely related.

A daughter of David Vawter married Achilles Stapp. Their children were Ely, Milton, Nancy and Mary, all of whom married Branhams. Achilles Stapp and family lived near Lexington, Kentucky.

JESSE VAWTER

Jesse Vawter was born in Culpeper county, Virginia, December 1, 1755. His parents were Episcopalians and he was sprinkled in infancy and his name enrolled on the church record. He was married to Elizabeth Watts, the daughter of John and Sallie (Barnett) Watts, on March 29, 1781. Elizabeth Watts was born December 30, 1762. Nine children were born to them: John, William, James, Frances, Mary, Sarah, Julia, Achilles and Ann.

Jesse Vawter was, in his early manhood, apprenticed by his father to a mechanic; was a soldier in the Revolutionary War for a short period; was baptized in a Baptist Church (Rapidan) in Culpeper county, Virginia, October, 1774.

About the year 1782 Jesse Vawter, with his wife and infant son John, moved from Virginia to the Holston river country, which is near where the three states, Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee, now join. Their twin sons, William and James, were born there. In 1785 Jesse, with his wife and four children, returned to Virginia for a visit. They left William, one of the twins, there, with his maternal grandparents. In 1787 Jesse visited Kentucky and decided to move there. He and his wife, with the infant Sarah, went for a farewell visit to Virginia in 1789, and in 1790 the family removed to Kentucky. On the way they passed the Crab Orchard country, old Milford Court House, stopping over night with Joseph Delaney, where Richmond, Kentucky, now is, crossing the Kentucky river, passing through Lexington, Kentucky, and arriving at Achilles Stapp's September 22, 1790. Jesse Vawter leased a farm from Hugh Shannon for five years from the fall of 1790. In 1795 he moved to Scott county, Kentucky, and settled on his own farm on the north side of the North Elkhorn river, three or four miles from the forks of the two Elkhorns and seven miles from Frankfort. In 1796 Franklin county was formed, and his house was then in Franklin county. (A fuller account of this part of Jesse Vawter's life will be found in the "Reminiscences" of his son John.)

In 1806 Jesse Vawter lost his land through a defective title. That same year he moved to Indiana and located on a hill overlooking Madison, on what is now known as the Michigan Hill Road. He called his home and farm Mount Glad, because he was glad there to rest from his wanderings and hoped to spend his days in peace. Madison was a very small settlement at that time. The Vawter family is inseparably connected with its early history and with the history of the Baptist denomination in Indiana.

Jesse Vawter began to preach in about the year 1800. He was ordained in 1805. In 1807 he assisted in the organization of the First Baptist Church in Jefferson county, which, at that time, was called the Coffee Creek Baptist Church. This church was organized at Mount Glad. At its constitution there were but fifteen members, and these were all of them connected with the four families who had come together from Kentucky in the fall of the year before. These four families were the Vawters, the Underwoods, the Edwards and the Jacksons. In 1808 these members built a meeting-house of logs on the hill east of the Michigan road near the present site of Fairmount Cemetery. When Jesse Vawter learned of a new settlement being formed, he visited it and held religious meetings. As the country developed his preaching tours were enlarged, covering great portions of the counties of Jefferson, Ripley, Switzerland, Jennings and Clark. In some cases these settlements were reached by traveling from twenty to forty miles through the wilderness, much of the way being marked only by blazed trees and broken-down underbrush.

In 1812 the Coffee Creek Church built a new frame meeting-house on the North Madison hill, now west of the railroad, and, with that change of location, also changed its name, afterwards being called the Mount Pleasant Baptist Church. This church was again moved and became the First Baptist Church of Madison. From its first formation until 1831 Jesse Vawter was almost its only pastor, Jacob Cox and William Vawter and Reuben Morey serving some of the time during the later years.

In the minutes of the Madison Association for 1838, we read: "Jesse Vawter was preëminently useful in the ministry and did much to advance the Messiah's kingdom here on earth, especially among the Baptist churches from their first organization in Indiana, but more particularly in the bounds of what was and is known as the Silver Creek, Coffee Creek, Loughery, Flat Rock and Madison Associations. He was without doubt one of the most pious men of his day, and, as a doctrinal, practical and experimental preacher, his qualifications and ability for evangelical preaching was far above mediocrity, and as a peace-maker he was, perhaps, without his equal in the congregations of which he was a member."

Elizabeth, wife of Jesse, died September 10, 1830. Afterwards Jesse lived with his daughter, Polly Branham, for a while, and with another daughter, Ann Moncrief, for a part of the time. He died March 20, 1838, in his eighty-third year.

Jesse Vawter was a quiet, thrifty, brown-eyed, peace-loving man. His granddaughter, Mrs. Frances (Vawter) King, of North Vernon, Indiana, in speaking of him said: "Grandfather was of a gentle nature. Every one loved him. He used to ride down horseback from Madison to see us. We would run to meet him, and he would say, 'There come my chickens.' He had lost the sight of one eye in an accident. We used to slip up on his blind side and kiss him, and he would always jump as though we had surprised him greatly. He never was impatient with us."

Mrs. Nancy (Moncrief) Amsden, of Madison, Indiana, another granddaughter, said: "I can remember grandfather well and I love his very name. He lived at my father's for some time before he died."

Elizabeth, wife of Jesse, was a woman of strong character, and her grandchildren stood somewhat in awe of her. She was an excellent housekeeper. Her great cleanliness was a matter for joking among her neighbors. They said that she never could endure flies—that she chased them out of her house and down to the Ohio river. In speaking of her fondness for scrubbing, they declared that they believed she scrubbed even the stumps in her yard.

JESSE VAWTER'S STORY, AS TOLD BY HIMSELF.

MAY 5, 1835.

I, Jesse Vawter, being in my eightieth year, do this day begin to write a journal of my life. I was born December, the first day, 1755, in Culpeper county, Virginia. I was sent to school in my eighth year. About this time my father moved into Orange county, and I worked on a farm for about ten years. I was the oldest child of six, and had by nature a mechanical turn of mind. I did some coopering, and made me a lathe and did some turning; I also made some wheels with a millwright. In 1774 my father hired me to a house carpenter and joiner. In 1775 my father set me at liberty to act for myself. At this time there was a great call for flax wheels. I joined my Uncle Oppill. We prepared our timber, built us a shop with two rooms, chimney in one and stove in the other. Each of us had a lathe made and mended wheels until in November, 1777, when I drove a team and moved a family out to Holston, three hundred miles, where I attended a farm with two negro men for Joseph Early.

In December, 1778, I went back to Virginia, and followed house carpenter's and joiner's work until November, 1779, when I drove a team for Uncle I. Coper, when I had three uncles and a brother all in a company moving to Holston. We unloaded our wagons the second day of December, 1779. I had bought of Joseph Early four hundred acres of land, on which my brother Philemon and Jonathan Underwood settled at that time. In the next year, 1780, I labored on a saw and grist mill for old Mr. Keywood. In December I went back to Virginia, and in 1781 was married, March twenty-ninth day, and in June was drafted for two months' tour. I got back to my wife's father's late in August, and was three months sick. My wife has told me that they sat up with me forty nights and thought every one might be the last.

The next winter and spring I made myself a light wagon and had it ironed nicely. In January, 1782, our son John was born.

In the latter part of April I geared three horses and loaded our little property and set out for Holston, three hundred miles, and unloaded the 17th of May on my own premises, and raised a tolerable crop of corn that year.

In the fall of 1783 I went to old Virginia with my wagon and moved Aunt Underwood to Holston. In 1785 I, with my wife and children, went again to Virginia on a visit, and was gone from the 13th day of September to the 24th of November. I had built me a shop, and followed making and mending wagons, and other work, as also attending to my farm until 1790. In December, 1787, I went to Kentucky on a visit to see my friends, and in 1790 I sold my land and moved to Kentucky, and landed there in September, 1790. In 1789 my wife and myself, with Sally our baby, went on horseback to old Virginia on a visit to bid our friends a final farewell, as we expected to move to Kentucky the next year. We unloaded our horses at Brother Stapp's, September 22d. I took a lease on Mr. Shannon's land for five years, put up a log cabin and moved into it in November, 1790. August 13, 1791, I left home and went to Holston to aid my Brother Philemon to move to Kentucky, and got home again September 20.

August 7, 1793, I left my home and went to Virginia to aid father Watts in moving to Kentucky, and got home again the 18th day of November, 1793. In 1795 I moved to the north fork of Elkhorn, three miles above the forks, and we lived there until September 6, 1806, when we moved over the Ohio to Indiana. During our residence in Kentucky I made looms, made and mended wagons, made and mended wheels, reels, and did other mechanical work, but never neglected my farm. And also, while I kept house in Indiana, I had a shop and did do almost all kinds of mechanical work, yet never neglected my farm. I have observed on a minute-book that I had earned in my shop $344, and that I had received for marriages $151. In 1830 we broke up housekeeping, and on September tenth my wife died, and I have made my home with Polly Branham, but am a great deal of my time absent. Since the death of my wife I have not confined myself to labor, but have done some little jobs, and have received about forty dollars for marriages. Julia Wise died May 10, 1834.

September, 1835, I attended at Loughery Association, and came home sick, and am yet quite feeble this first of December.

A LATER STATEMENT BY JESSE VAWTER

At the request of one of my friends I now sit down to record some of the occurrences of my past life.

I, Jesse Vawter, was born December 1, 1755. My parents were David and Mary Vawter, members of the Episcopalian Church. I was sprinkled in infancy and received as a member of that church, and could read my Bible in my eighth year, and was brought up to farming, but had by nature a mechanical turn of mind.

At ten years of age I had serious thoughts of religion and heard a parson preach from these words: "Who among us shall dwell with devouring fire, who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings?" Isaiah xxxiii:14. That subject made a deep impression on my mind, although I understood nothing more than a local fire. About this time I committed the Lord's Prayer, which I would repeat when I would lie down at night and in the morning, in order to get religion, but finally concluded that I would live moral and sober until I married and then I would get religion, concluding that religion did not suit young people and when I was settled in the world it would be easy to obtain it.

As stated above, my mind inclined to mechanical labor. In 1774, in my nineteenth year, my father consented to hire me to a house carpenter and joiner. In the course of that year our work led us twenty miles from my father's, and in the bounds of Baptist preaching. Perhaps in the month of May I went to the first meeting. The preacher was Thomas Ammons; his text was Job x:15: "If I be wicked woe unto me, but if I be righteous yet will I not lift up my head." These words came home to my heart with such light and power that they made me tremble. I had never felt the like before. I strove to be composed and not let any person know I was affected, but all in vain, the tears would run. I did not think I was as wicked as some, but thought I was not altogether right—that there was some little wrong about me, and now I thought the Lord had called on me to repent and seek Him, which I was determined to do. I thought by praying, reading and reforming that I should soon atone for my past sins and bring God under obligations to me (alas! poor blind man).

Instead of that, I discovered the corruption of my nature and the deceit of my heart, and that all my efforts had been selfish and, of course, sinful, and that God says, “Son, give me thy heart,” which I had not done. I now did believe that God had called me, and if I had sought Him through Jesus Christ, I might have obtained mercy; but now it appeared to me as if all hope was gone forever. I yet would try to pray, but thought my prayers only added to my guilt. I concluded God was angry with me, that his law condemned me, and it was in vain to ask His mercy, for I thought my case was finally fixed forever. Yet my heart would pray for mercy if it could be bestowed according to the divine government, for I did believe God was right and His law was right, and if I was condemned forever it would be right, too. I concluded justice would not suffer me to live on the earth when right appeared. I thought I should be in eternity before morning, and in the morning that justice would terminate my life before night.

One clear morning in July, 1774, I thought I would retire and try to pray once more before I died. When I got to the place I thought I dare not ask for mercy, yet my heart seemed to crave mercy, but I could not see how God could have mercy on me consistent with His divine perfection. Finally I concluded my fate was fixed to go down to ruin forever, and I rose up to go to my work. As I arose a reconciliation took place in my mind—the will of the Lord be done. With this reconciliation I had a view of Jesus and His righteousness. I thought all nature shone with His glory. I could now see how God could have mercy upon poor sinners and be just and justify him that believed in Jesus. I did believe He had lived and died for sinners and rose again for their justification, and that I was one of those poor sinners that He came to seek and save. My soul was filled with love. I thought I could tell to my companions how good God was, and they would feel as I did, but they understood not what I told them. In the month of October our work led us into the bounds of another Baptist church, to which I offered myself and was received and baptized. The first Saturday meeting I ever attended I thought was the prettiest sight I ever saw. The church was called Rapidan, in Culpeper county, Virginia, but now Madison county.

I thought I would work as much as would keep myself in clothes and spend my time in going to meeting and be with the preachers; which I did for some years. I would sing and pray and close meetings for the preachers. In 1780 I began to think it was best for young persons to marry, and on the 29th day of March, 1781, I was married to Elizabeth, daughter of John and Sarah Watts, of Culpeper county, Virginia. In January, 1782, the 8th day, our first son, John, was born, and in May we moved to Holston, where we lived eight years, and had two sons and three daughters born, and joined a Baptist church, whose monthly meetings were twenty miles off. The preacher would come to my house and have meeting in our neighborhood. Having lost all hope of a Baptist church near us, we moved to Kentucky in 1790, where we joined the Great Crossing Church in Scott county, and lived there five years. While there I appeared to be a silent member. In 1795 we moved down on the north fork of the Elkhorn and moved our membership to Melonal's Run, where I was more active.

In 1799 a revival of religion broke out on the Ohio, and in 1800 it appeared to spread over the whole state. A number of my neighbors and four of my children had obtained hope in Jesus, which led us to form ourselves into a church and build us a house. About this time my mind got exercised about preaching, which soon led to my ordination.

Here we lived five or six years in great harmony, until I lost my place. In 1806 we moved to Indiana. It may be proper here for me to state the difference in my mind as respects preaching. I thought that preachers were a grade higher than common members and that it would be wicked in me to think of preaching, but to sing, and to pray, and to exhort was the privilege of every member, and also to tell how good the Lord was, which I did do for many years, with delight to myself and some others. When my mind took a turn for preaching it was the greatest trial I had ever met with, for I thought no man ought to preach but such as the Lord called to that work, and I could not believe that I was called to preach, and to run before I was sent would be wicked, and to refuse to do what the Lord enjoined on me would be wicked. It appeared like death to go forward and death to be silent.

About this time I heard two brethren preach; the first was from the words of Jephtha: "I have opened my mouth to the Lord and I can not go back." The other was: "Woe to him that striveth with his Maker." I had opened my mouth to the Lord and was unwilling to go back; and I thought I would rather die than to strive against the Lord. Finally, I concluded to submit my case to my brethren, for they all appeared to encourage me to go forward; and to this day I am made to wonder how it is that my brethren do invite me onward. But I do believe the best evidence that a man can have that it is his duty to preach is the voice of his brethren, for no man is a proper judge of himself; he will judge too high or too low of his own performances.

I have this day entered my eightieth year. I have been a citizen of four states, was born in Virginia, lived there twenty-five years; then moved into the edge of North Carolina, and lived there ten years; and then moved into Kentucky and lived there sixteen years, and in 1806 moved into Indiana. I have been a member of eight churches, and have in general sat under the same doctrine that I first believed, which was the total depravity of human nature; the divine character and sonship of Jesus Christ; salvation alone by free and sovereign grace, effectual calling, justification by the righteousness of Jesus Christ imputed, and the final perseverance of the saints; and that the atonement made by Jesus Christ is general in its nature, but special in its application, and that the change that takes place in the sinner is by the spirit of God illuminating the eyes of the understanding so as to discover the purity of God's laws and the nature of sin, and the way of life and salvation by Jesus Christ, and where this faith is found it will produce a corresponding conversation and deportment. I believe also in the overruling grace of God and the freedom of the will, and that God will judge the world by that man whom He hath ordained, and that there will be a resurrection of all in that day.

I have been at the constitution of twelve churches, and have aided at the ordination of eight ministers; have baptized persons in eighteen churches; the highest number at any one time was 18, and the greatest number in any one church was 127. I have been at the formation of three associations, and have served as moderator twenty-three years in succession; and have solemnized perhaps little short of two hundred marriages. In the year 1834 I attended three associations. In the year 1835 I attended three associations and have baptized three persons this year. In 1836 I was at Coffee Creek Association, but was very feeble. In 1837 I was at Madison Association, and was very feeble.

OLD PEOPLE'S MEETING.

"On Wednesday, April 2, 1862, all the living children of Jesse Vawter, deceased (it being the birthday of William and James Vawter, each being that day seventy-nine years old), by invitation of these two brothers, met at the house of Williamson D. Vawter, the son of William Vawter, in the town of Vernon, and partook of an excellent dinner prepared by W. D. Vawter and wife. On this occasion the children were John Vawter, in the eighty-first year of his age; Wm. Vawter and Francis, his wife; James Vawter and Sally, his wife; the widow, Sally V. Stribling; Abner Moncrief and Ann V., his wife; the widow, Patsy Vawter, wife of Achilles Vawter, who died after the meeting was agreed to be holden in his own town. The only one of the living adopted children absent was Matthew Wise, who was unable by disease and age to attend. All of these people were among the first white inhabitants in and near where the city of Madison now is, while it was yet a heavy forest. The entire number present now are, and nearly all were at that early day, members of the Baptist denomination.

“On coming together, John Vawter, after an exchange of salutations and inquiries about absent friends, and recounting old times and hard times, old age and its infirmities, proposed, as a sentiment and as a rule of action for each, this language of the poet: ‘Come, let us anew our journey pursue,’ etc. All seemed to harmonize in the sentiment and, after singing the hymn twice, we were invited to the dinner-table, and after dinner were invited by Smith Vawter to take tea with him. All parties agreeing to do so, we repaired to his residence and partook of an excellent supper. After this social interview the company separated, perhaps never all to meet in time again. A list of the age of each was made out by W. D. Vawter and the number of children and grandchildren of each. Wm. Vawter and wife have of children, grandchildren and great grandchildren, sixty or seventy.”

The above was written for the Vernon Banner, April 4, 1862, by John Vawter, who was then living at Morgantown, Ind.

THE SONS OF JESSE VAWTER

I

JOHN VAWTER

John Vawter, the son of Jesse and Elizabeth (Watts) Vawter, was born in Orange (now Madison) county, Virginia, January 8, 1782. He was married four times, the first time to Polly Smith on December 17, 1805. Polly Smith was born December 30, 1781; died July 19, 1825. Their children were Smith, Jane and Emily. After the death of Polly S. Vawter John Vawter married Jane Smith, a sister of Polly. She died October 4, 1826, leaving no children. Then John Vawter married Ruth Minton, who was born in January, 1817, and had three children, Marion, Mary and Allan. Ruth (Minton) Vawter died September 2, 1850, and John Vawter married, October 17, 1850, Mrs. Martha Pearce, by whom he had one child, Emma, who was born May 11, 1854, and killed by falling lumber November 13, 1859. Mrs. Martha (McGannon) Pearce Vawter was born March 8, 1822; died January 21, 1892.

"John Vawter was licensed as a Baptist preacher in 1804, and removed from Kentucky to Madison, Indiana, in 1807. He was the first magistrate of Madison, and was soon afterwards elected sheriff of Jefferson and Clark counties, and in 1810 was appointed U. S. Marshal for the state. He served as frontier ranger during the Indian campaign of 1811-13; was elected colonel of militia of Jennings county in 1817; founded Vernon, the county seat of Jennings county; laid out Vernon and gave every third lot to the town. He was pastor of the Baptist church in Vernon from 1821-48, a member of the legislature from 1831-5, and in 1836 of the senate, where he was instrumental in securing the adoption of a policy of internal improvement by the state. He removed to Morgan county in 1848, founded Morgantown and presented a brick church to the Baptist congregation of that place. He died August 17, 1862."

The following is an account of the early life of John Vawter, written by himself. He says:

✓ "I now am an old man in the eighty-first year of my age. I was born January 8, 1782. My father was Elder Jesse Vawter. My mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Watts. My parents, poor, frugal, honest and industrious, were both born in Culpeper or Orange county, Virginia; Jesse, on the first day of December, 1755; Elizabeth, his wife, on the 30th of December, 1762. They were married on the 29th of March, 1781, and lived to see all of their children, nine in number, grown and married. The eldest was myself, John. The others were: William and James (twins), Fanny, Mary, Sally, Julia, Achilles and Ann. I was born in Culpeper or Orange county, Virginia. It is now Madison county. William, James, Fanny, Sally and Mary were born in North Carolina, now Sullivan county, Tennessee, called the state of Franklin at that time. Julia, Achilles and Ann were born in Kentucky.

"On my father's side we are descended from Saxon families. Toward the close of the sixteenth century three brothers, John, Bartholomew and Angus, came from England to the colony of Virginia. The three brothers originally spelled their name V-a-w-l-t-e-r, but for some unknown reason dropped the 'l' after coming to Virginia, and to this day the entire family of the three brothers and their numerous descendants all spell their name V-a-w-t-e-r.

"My great, great grandfather's name was John, and that was also the name of my great grandfather, who had four sons, Bartholomew, Angus, Richard and David,* and two daughters, whose names were Winifred and Margaret. David was my grandfather. David had three sons, Jesse, Philemon and William, and three daughters, Winifred, Margaret and Mary. Jesse was my father.

"Jesse in his youthful days was naturally a mechanic, and his father, David, consented to his learning a trade. While working as an apprentice in 1774 or '75, and during the Revolutionary War (of which he was afterwards a soldier), he heard of certain traveling preachers in Virginia. He attended one of the appointments at which Thomas Ammons was the preacher. His text was in the book of Job, tenth chapter and fifteenth verse: 'If I be wicked, woe unto me,' etc. This sermon, under the influence of God's Holy Spirit, opened the door of hope in the sure mercies of God's dear Son. He was soon afterwards united with the Baptist church in Culpeper or Orange county, Virginia, and continued a useful and exemplary member of the Baptist order to the day of his death in the eighty-third year of his age. Jesse was the first-born of six children. The others all died before he did. His wife, Elizabeth, died nearly eight years before him.

"I do not remember my father's mother. Her maiden name was Rucker. After the death of her husband, David Vawter, she married a Rentfrow and died in Kentucky.

"Elizabeth Vawter, wife of Jesse and my mother, was a daughter of John and Sarah Watts of Orange county, Virginia. John Watts was a small man, of English stock. His wife was a Barnett, of fine figure, rather portly and of English descent. I remember these grandparents well. They came to Kentucky to live in the year 1793. They both lived to a good old age and both died in Kentucky. Grandmother outlived grandfather several years.

"I can remember as far back as the year 1785, when my father and mother, with four of their children, went on a visit to Virginia and left my brother William with mother's parents, John and Sarah Watts. I have a distinct recollection of the closing scenes, of the weeping, of my feelings on the return to Holston, of crossing New river, etc.

"I remember my father's visit to Kentucky in 1787, when the new country was called by the name of Levisa Country. In the year 1788 or 1789 my father went to Keywood Mills and put me on a sack of grain on the back of a rough-riding horse. Going down a steep descent, off I went with the sack on top of me. I carried bruises for many days made by the sharp, hard stones.

"I remember when my father and mother went to Virginia in the year 1789 on horseback with Sally, the infant babe. They brought brother William back with them. William would say, 'Your Daddie' and 'Your Mamma.' He would not own his father and mother until compelled to do so.

"I remember being sent by my mother in company with my brother William to bring home the cows. We got lost and traveled many miles and crossed to Keywood Mills, and then we knew the way home. We abandoned the cows, thinking that they didn't intend to go home, and yet they went directly there.

"I have a distinct recollection of the winding up of matters in the Holston country and of the family moving to Kentucky in 1790. My father was thrown from his horse with his rifle into Beaver creek on the first day's travel. We waited at Bean's Station for additional immigrants to meet and increase the safety of the company in their march through the wilderness. They did not come. While at the station we were greatly alarmed one night by some cow-drivers throwing a bundle of cane on the fire. It made a great noise while burning. We decided to move on though few in number. I remember that a raven for several days advanced ahead of us, alighting on the trees and keeping up a continual squawking; of crossing the Clinch river; the turning out of the horses to graze; the men going across the river to fish; that I was swamped in attempting to go to them and came near being drowned; of father's horse, with a leather sack of shop tools on his back, trying a near way to get up a steep bank and falling back with the sack of tools into the valley below.

"I remember well seeing many bones of individuals who had been killed by the Indians and their bodies buried so close to the surface that the wolves had dragged them out; of the Indian blinds, behind which they concealed themselves. These were made of bushes stuck in the ground. At the time we saw them the bushes were dry. I remember riding on one of the pack horses and carrying a large basket of provisions for many days to accommodate those who were hungry between meals; also of sister Fanny falling off of the animal on which mother rode; of the horse treading on her leg and bending it so much that, at first, it was thought to be broken, but it proved otherwise.

"On the day's travel before reaching Crab Orchard, Uncle Achilles Stapp was so exhausted that he sat down at the root of a tree, determined to remain there alone, saying that if the Indians came, come they must, he could not and would not go any farther. Presently, along came Molly Jackson, a cousin to my father, and gave the tired man a bottle of whisky. He drank, and it so revived him that he traveled on with the rest. That night the most of the company reached Crab Orchard. All except mother lay down as if all danger was over. She armed herself with a small ax and kept watch, but in the morning all were safe. The next day we passed the old Milford Court House. At night we reached Joseph Delaney's, where Richmond now is, in Madison county, Kentucky. The next day was rainy. We crossed the Kentucky river. One of the pack horses lay down in the river with mother's feather beds. We passed through Lexington that same day and arrived, all tired out, at Achilles Stapp's about sundown on the 22d of September, 1790.

"In the fall of 1790 father took a lease of Mr. Shannon for five years. I remember the cabin and other buildings put up on the place; of making ten pounds of sugar there on New Year's day in 1791; of four polecats finding their way to father's meat barrel in a rail pen; of father's determining to make them leave the barrel, and how they punished him for driving them out by spoiling his meat. I also remember when a weasel caught a hen. Brother William picked up the hen, and the weasel let go the hen and buried its teeth in William's thumb.

"The first school I was sent to was kept by a man named Henry Jenkins. No books were then used in the school except Delworth's spelling-book, a common primer and the New Testament. At that time it was customary to turn the teacher out a little before Christmas until after New Year's. It was a time of great frolic and fun among the scholars. It was all right, too, with the parents. The school was continued about six months. The second school teacher in the same place was Benjamin Quinn. Father sent William and James to Benjamin Quinn and sent me to make up their lost time. Although I was not a regular scholar Quinn called me up and whipped me until he drew blood for cutting off his hogs' tails, as he said. The charge was wholly untrue, and I determined that when I became a man I would punish Quinn by whipping him, but on arriving at manhood I thought better of it.

"I have a lively recollection of the first money I ever owned. A traveling man came to the school while I was there and inquired the way to a neighbor's. It being play time, I went with the man and showed him the way, for which he gave me six and one-fourth cents. The older boys got around me and gave me an old written copy-book, a few sheets of paper and a ball for my money. On going home, elated with my treasures and good fortune, father threw away the ball, and the paper was worthless. The next money I received was for a hand-rake I made for Mr. Joshua Stapp. He gave me six and one-fourth cents for the rake. I took care not to purchase old copy-books, paper and balls with the money, but laid it away until friend Stapp employed me to do a second job of work, for which he gave me twelve and one-half cents, called nine pence. The next piece of money owned by me I found in the hay loft of an old horse mill. It was customary in those days to cut up the money and make, if possible, nine nine-pence pieces out of a dollar, or five quarters. Nearly all the silver change was thus cut up for many years.

"About that time my father sent me to help a man in taking corn on horseback to a merchant in Georgetown. The man thought that he must treat all the boys to what they could drink for their services. The weather was cold and the argument was, 'Drink and get warm.' I yielded and felt myself quite a man. I lost all fear and shame and could talk with any one and every one.

"The next summer my father set me to plowing with Grandfather Watts's black horse. The flies were bad, and the horse would sweep his tail continually over the lines to drive off the flies. In order to remedy the evil I cut all the hair off the horse's tail and then denied it. This is the first time I recollect doing wrong and denying it. This was in the year 1794.

"In the year 1795 father moved from his Shannon lease in Scott county on to the land he had purchased on the north side of the North Elkhorn, some three or four miles from his first settlement, three miles from the two forks of the Elkhorns and seven miles from Frankfort. This was the second settlement made in the woods by father after coming to Kentucky, and each time the commencement was in Woodford county. In the winter of 1790-1791, Scott county was formed out of a part of Woodford county, and that time father was in Scott county. In like manner, in 1795-96, Franklin county was formed from Woodford county, and father's new residence was in the county of Franklin. The Indians did considerable mischief near these settlements in stealing horses and in killing several people.

"In the year 1795-1796 peace was made on our northern frontier.

"In the year 1796 seven of father's family were all taken down with the genuine shaking ague and fever. I was attacked in the month of August and did not recover for about sixteen months. For one month I had two shakes a day. Father and sister Mary were the only ones who escaped the disease."

At this point the story was cut short by the death of the writer, who was then eighty. An article was found, however, at North Madison, Indiana, in an old scrap-book belonging to Mrs. Sarah Stribling, which was written by Col. Vawter and published in the Madison Courier in the year 1850. This article, which follows, carries on the story with a break of only a few years.

"Father, with six or eight other Kentuckians from Franklin and Scott counties, visited what was then called the new purchase at a very early date. A part journeyed by land and a part by water. The land party crossed the Ohio river at Port William, the others descending the Kentucky and Ohio rivers in a pirogue to a point opposite Milton. The pirogue answered the double purpose of carrying forward the provisions of the company and enabling the men to pass from one bank to the other, swimming their horses alongside. The company made their headquarters in the river bottom in the eastern extremity of the city limits of Madison. In the day the company divided into two parties, exploring the adjacent highlands to the head of Crooked creek and the neighboring lands of Clifty. They met at night and reported their discoveries. To Crooked creek they gave the name of Mill creek; to Clifty, Hard Scrabble; but subsequently, on learning the name of each stream, the red man's name prevailed with the settlers.

"At that time, December, 1805, Elder Jesse Vawter selected for his residence the spot where Judge S. C. Stevens now resides on the hill. He returned home and made every arrangement for taking possession of his new home early in the spring of 1806. He, with others, made the first settlement in and about Madison. Nearly all the settlements made in that year and the two or three succeeding years were made on the highlands. Among the first settlers in the county were Elder Jesse Vawter, James Underwood, Joshua Jackson, Colby Underwood and James Edwards, all of the Baptist denomination. East of Crooked creek were Col. John Ryker, Paul Froman, Ralph Griffin, Joseph Lane and others, the last two families being Baptists. West and southwest were Col. Samuel Smock, James Arbuckle, Michael and Felix Monroe, Isaiah Blankinship, Amos Chitwood and others. The first corn was raised in Jefferson county in the year 1806, most of it being planted as late as June. The first preaching in the early settlements within the bounds of Jefferson and Switzerland counties was by Baptist ministers. Elder Jesse Vawter, John Taylor, Philemon Vawter and John Reese were early settlers and the only resident ministers at that time in the vicinity of what is now the city of Madison. From the year 1805, their first visit, until 1810, the Baptist was the only organized church in the limits of what is now Jefferson and Switzerland counties. In March, 1807, at the home of Jesse Vawter, a Baptist church was organized called Crooked Creek Church, afterwards Mount Pleasant Church.

"The first settlement made in the river bottom near Madison was by William and John Hall in 1806 or 1807, a little above Isom Ross's tanyard (purchased by Jonathan Lyon in 1808). The second was made by John H. Wagoner on the high bank a little west of Main street, in Madison. Wagoner unloaded his boat on the 10th day of May, 1808, and immediately commenced building a house to live in. The third person who settled in the limits of the present city was Robert M. Trotter, afterwards a justice of the peace; the fourth was Joshua Wilkinson, a single man; the fifth was Joseph Strickland, afterwards justice of the peace, and with Strickland came a man by the name of Schofield and perhaps others not recollected. Next came John Booth, the first innkeeper; then John Sering, Samuel Burnet (second innkeeper); then Charles Easton with a number of others, which brings us down to the time of the first sale of lots in Madison in February, 1811. During all the above time, all the preaching for twenty to thirty-five miles up and down the river and through the county was of the Baptist order. The first sermon ever delivered within the chartered limits of Madison was by Elder Jesse Vawter, among the cottonwoods on the river beach, a little above the stone mill. The text was the first verse, first chapter of John's Gospel. It was a funeral occasion, the death of widow Slack. Mrs. Jonathan Lyon, mother of Philemon Vawter, closed the service. This was the first death and funeral preached within the vicinity of Madison.

"After the land sales in May, 1808, and the sale of lots in Madison in 1811, the town and the country commenced filling up pretty rapidly with settlers. The first man who preached in Madison, other than Baptist, was of the name of Hawkins, a hell reductioner, who afterwards became a convert to Baptist belief. Some time after the establishment of courts in Madison, and during the sitting of the court, Elijah Sparks, an attorney-at-law and Methodist minister, and Jesse L. Holman, a Baptist exhorter, both of Dearborn county, during the court week, preached for the people at the house of Philemon Vawter, near the Crooked creek graveyard. This was the first Methodist preaching in the immediate vicinity of Madison. After public buildings were erected in Madison, Col. Brown, a Methodist preacher, preached in Madison and another by the name of Frame; and so did old Dr. Fiske. About this time, if I mistake not, Dr. Oglesby commenced preaching in Madison, also a man by the name of Strange, also Squire Strother (of Kentucky) and Amos Chitwood. In the year of 1812 or 1813, not earlier, a Methodist meeting-house was built in Madison, and from that time Methodism began to take root and grow in the country. About this time Elder William Robinson, a Presbyterian preacher, moved into Madison and commenced preaching, and soon organized a church of his order. He was succeeded by a man by the name of Searl. So much for the early religious denominations about and in Madison.

"I was the first justice of the peace within the vicinity of Madison while it was in Clark county. My commission bears the date the 16th of July, 1808. The first judges for Jefferson county were Gen. William McFarland, president of the Court of Common Pleas, and Samuel Smock and William Colton, his associates. The first clerk and recorder was Col. John Paul; second clerk, Richard C. Talbot. First sheriff, John Vawter, commissioned such the 14th of December, 1810, retired from the office by virtue of a commission dated 29th of July, 1813, as United States marshal for Indiana Territory. The second sheriff was James Vawter (I am not certain but Basil Bentley was second sheriff in Jefferson county, but very soon retired from office). The third sheriff, Thomas T. Stribling. The first court ever held in Jefferson county was held in a log cabin owned by John H. Wagoner, in February, 1811. The sale of the first lots in Madison (old town) was in the same month; the first proprietors, Col. John Paul, Lewis Davis and Jonathan Lyon; the first addition west, surveyed by me for Col. John Paul. The first court house, called the Buckeye House, was built in 1811. It was built by myself for the proprietors. The first jail was a square log house, builder's name not now recollected; first public house was kept by John Booth; second, by Samuel Burnet; third by Major Henry Ristine. The first store was owned by John Sering & Co.; a drug store was started about the same time by Dr. Drake & Co.; the third store was opened by S. C. Stevens; fourth by myself; fifth by J. & N. Hunt; sixth by McCabe & Co.; seventh by Mr. Clarkston; eighth by John McIntire. The first physician was of the name of Fiske; second James Hicks; third John Howes; fourth David H. Maxwell. The first attorney-general, Alex. A. Meek; the second, a man by the name of Oulds; third, Gen. William Hendricks. The first dray ever used in Madison was owned by Simeon Reynolds, and managed by his most excellent son, William L. Reynolds.

"I was personally acquainted with the first proprietors of the town. A more excellent or upright good man than Col. Paul was hard to be found. He was one of Gen. Roger Clark's bold, adventurous soldiers, who aided in the capture of Kaskaskia and Vincennes. He was elected one of the representatives from Clark county in the year 1810. This was previous to the formation of Jefferson county, and Col. Paul then resided at Madison. He was also one of the members for Jefferson county who formed the present constitution of Indiana. I was crier of the first sale of lots in Madison, but had nothing to do with the surveying or laying out of the same. Laid out the first addition west of Broadway for Col. Paul in the winter of 1814 and 1815. Had nothing to do with any addition to the town.

"My second visit to Indiana was in May, 1806. I came in a pirogue and landed a little above the stone mill opposite Milton, visited the highlands east and west of Crooked creek, continued at my father's half-faced shanty until near the middle of June in order to assist him in getting his corn planted; returned in the same craft with my mother and other relatives to Frankfort, Kentucky. In September, 1806, my father moved his family from Kentucky to Mount Glad, the place where Judge S. C. Stevens now resides. In December, 1806, I made my third visit to Indiana in company with John Branham, a brother-in-law, and James Vawter. We aided in driving my father's cattle and fattened and stock hogs from his Kentucky residence to his new home in what was then a wilderness. At this time I made a selection of a place to move myself and family to in the coming spring. It was the identical spot where the depot and machine shops of the railroad company are now upon the hill. In March, 1807, I arrived with my family, wife, and one child, at my original selected site in the woods. In 1808 I built a house nearly opposite Godman's pork-house on the hill and resided there until 1812. In this year I purchased property in Madison and moved to it. The property purchased by me was two lots on Main Cross street, east of Polley and Butler's iron store and west of Mulberry street. In 1814 I sold both lots to Mr. David McClure. In the winter of 1815 I purchased of Col. John Paul the corner now owned by George M. Phelps, and built a large frame house (large for the size of the houses in Madison). Had the water conveyed by pipes, in connection with Col. Paul, from the hill at Hite's tanyard to the same, expecting to live and end my days there. In the same year I sold it also to David McClure, moved to Vernon in November, 1815, and continued to reside there until November, 1849, with my family. Since November, 1849, have resided in Morgantown, Morgan county, Indiana.

JOHN VAWTER.

"April 13, 1850."

Perhaps the personality of John Vawter can best be realized by giving some stories that are told of him by his neighbors and friends and by giving something of his life in Vernon. He had a wide acquaintance, traveled around a great deal for those days and kept in touch with all his relatives. A number of these stories were taken from an article by Caroline Pabody Frost, which was published in the Vernon Journal, and the rest were told by other friends.

"Col. John Vawter was United States surveyor for a portion of the Northwest Territory. He came to the place where Vernon now stands in 1813. He was greatly struck with the beauty of the country and determined to make it his future home. He platted the town in 1815 and moved there the same year. At this time there was but one white family in Jennings county. In this wilderness Col. Vawter left his young wife and little children while he went upon his surveying tours, giving strict injunctions that no Indians be allowed to enter the house or get any liquor. One day soon after Col. Vawter left home two Indians came to the door, and pushing in without leave, demanded 'fire-water.' Mrs. Vawter told them that she had none for them, and to appease their anger brought out some ribbon. They were delighted with the gift of a yard or two apiece of orange colored ribbon. Smith Vawter, the small son of Col. Vawter, was sitting in the chimney corner watching the savages with absorbing interest, when one of them suddenly sprang to his feet with a blood curdling war-whoop and, swinging his tomahawk high in the air, stood with it poised over the boy's head for what seemed an age to the boy, who thought his time had come, but who looked the savage calmly in the eye. The Indian dropped the tomahawk and sat down, saying that he was a brave boy and would make a 'heap good Indian.' The Indians then ransacked the cabin for liquor and, finding a treasured bottle of peach brandy, each took a drink, and, generously leaving the bottle, departed."

"In the year 1816 three houses were built in Vernon, and little clearings with cabins in the center began to dot the surrounding wilderness. The first school house was built by Col. Vawter on the 'Commons' near where the railroad bridge now stands. In its one room Mrs. Lard (Vernon's first teacher) cooked, slept and taught. The older pupils read in the English Reader, the younger ones in the spelling-book, which they were required to spell nearly through, both off and on the book, before beginning on 'In Adam's fall, We sinned all' and 'Young Obidias, David and Josias, All were pious.' Each one did sums on his slate. The Murray Grammar and parsing finished the list."

"The first church (the Baptist) was organized in Vernon in 1816, and John Vawter was one of its seven members.

"The first board of commissioners met in Vernon, March 5, 1817. John Vawter was appointed clerk and also 'to act as agent for the transaction of all such duties as are required by an act of the late territorial legislature for fixing the seats of justice in all new counties that may be set off.' Ordered at the same meeting 'that John Vawter have the use of the public grounds to sow a crop of oats, he to sow the same with timothy or blue grass.'

"On April 1, 1817, the board ordered the report of the commissioner for fixing the county seat be recorded as soon as the recorder's office be established, John Vawter and David McClure having offered to the commissioners various lots of land and sums of money 'on condition of the seat of justice being established on the public grounds in the town of Vernon.' The land consisted of seventy town lots, besides the public ground; two acres of land for a burying-ground; three lots of an acre each for places of religious worship, school-houses, etc., all in suitable places; a donation of land on the north and south of town. The land east of said town, and west of the creek, was ever to remain 'open and common to the inhabitants of said town and county.'

"In the year 1818, John Vawter, treasurer of the county, produced his vouchers showing he had received and paid out $265.50.

"At the meeting of the board December, 1822, appears the first mention of the 'Jennings County Seminary.'

"Col. Vawter, trustee, reports a long list of fines paid to him by justices of the peace. The following fines were imposed on divers persons by sundry justices: Profane swearing, $4.00; assault, $0.01; fighting, $0.50; Sabbath breaking, $1.00; profane swearing, $1.00; assault, $0.50; selling liquor without license, $2.00."

"The first newspaper, The Vernon Visitor, was owned and edited by John Vawter and printed by Richard Randall. The outfit of this paper consisted of a meager supply of type and one of the old-fashioned Washington hand-presses, it being necessary, in order to print the paper, for a boy to roll the type with a large brayer at every impression. The first account of payments and receipts in this printing office is dated March 1, 1840.

Here the account ends without saying how long a period of time it covers. The paper was sold early in the forties to Amos Frost.

"Col. Vawter and Dr. Pabody were among the early legislators for the new state of Indiana. They both served for several consecutive terms, the former in the senate, the latter in the house. They made the journey to the capital on horseback, carrying their wardrobes in their saddle-bags. These two legislators were Whigs and advocates of 'internal improvement,' which was the 'bone of contention' between the two parties.

"Col. Vawter was a zealous advocate and untiring worker for the construction of the Madison and Indianapolis Railroad, much to the disgust of some of his neighbors, who saw in the building of that road only ruin to the country. Steam cars, they said, would do away entirely with hauling, deprive the workingman of work and wages, horses would lose their value, frightful accidents would occur from the frightening of cattle and horses by the locomotive, and lastly, there would not be enough produce between Madison and Indianapolis to load one train of cars. The wordy war was long and loud. When the surveyors appeared in Vernon and proceeded to run their line through Col. Vawter's front hall, the rejoicing of his opponents was great; but he, stanch to his principles, told them to go ahead, he would get his house out of the way, and so he did. He moved it across the street (where it now forms part of the house near the railroad bridge) and he saw his garden and orchard covered by the embankment without a murmur.

"During the building of the road occurred the 'Irish riot,' the most exciting episode in Vernon history excepting perhaps the 'Morgan raid.' The Irish laborers belonged to two clans, the Corkonians and the Fardowns, which were constantly on the warpath. The latter outnumbered the former and made an effort to have the Corkonians discharged by the contractors."

There are many anecdotes told of John Vawter while he lived in Vernon and in Morgantown. He was a minister, but in those days a minister was compelled to make a living in other ways than by preaching, as he did not receive compensation for his services. As a minister Col. Vawter was able to indulge his love for match-making and, as Taylor Vawter said, "He just loved to marry people for fun."

Caroline Pabody Frost said that it was expected that matrimony was the impending fate of any one who worked for Col. John Vawter. "In one instance a bashful young man employed in his printing office was invited over to take Christmas dinner with him. He was duly admonished on his arrival to clean his feet on the door mat, and at the table to eat all that he took on his plate. When dinner was over he was taken into the parlor. Col. Vawter left the room, but presently returned, bringing with him the buxom lass who had cooked the dinner. A chair was drawn up beside the young man and she was seated upon it. 'There,' said Col. Vawter, as he left the room, 'I have done my part, now you do yours.' What followed did not then transpire, but this time it was not a wedding."

It was said that Col. Vawter had a great deal to do with the marriage of Williamson D. Vawter and his first wife, Mary Tighlman Crowder. Neither one of the young people was of age, and the father of Williamson was very much opposed to the marriage on that account. Col. Vawter persuaded the young woman to go on a visit to a friend in an adjoining county and stay there a sufficient time until the license could be procured. Then he furnished Williamson, who was working for him at that time, with a horse and money to go to the place where she was and get married.

"When Col. John Vawter was a widower for the second time his son Smith was going to see a girl by the name of Minton. His father said to him: 'Now, Smith, I want you to stop going to the Minton house.' Smith, like the good son he was, stopped going, thinking his father had some objection to the family. The first thing Smith knew his father was about to be married to Ruth Minton himself. The day the wedding took place Smith climbed one of the tallest trees in his father's front yard, and as the wedding procession was returning from the church and Col. Vawter and his bride were passing under the tree where Smith was concealed, Smith sang out, 'O, good Lord, what have I done, I've married the father instead of the son!'

"Col. Vawter was married four times himself and his son Smith five times. It is told that at the funeral of Smith Vawter's third wife there were a number of ministers who talked in an affecting manner, and then Col. Vawter arose. He said: 'My son, we all sympathize deeply with you in your affliction. You are just burying your third beloved companion while I am living with my third. When my second wife was dying I said to her: "Oh, my dear, what shall I do?" She replied: "John, the Lord will provide." I say the same to you, my dear son Smith. The Lord will provide for you.'

"When Col. John Vawter was in search of a fourth wife he went one day to the door of the house where Mrs. Martha Pearce lived. She asked him to come in. 'No, no, Sister Pearce,' said he, 'I am just on a little matter of business. I am going to Madison to-day and will be back to-morrow. I want to know if you will marry me. I will stop for your reply when I return. Good day, Sister Pearce.'*

"When Smith Vawter, the son of John Vawter, wished to join the church and was being questioned by the ministers in regard to his belief, he said: 'I believe in Christ, but further than that I can not go.' One of the ministers said: 'Then, my son, I can not baptize you.' Col. John Vawter said: 'Well, I will then, my son,' and he did.

"Col. Vawter was very particular about what he ate and the manner in which it was prepared. While out on a preaching tour he and a number of others went to a house for dinner. As soon as they were invited out to dinner, he said to the hostess: 'Have you any corn bread?' 'No,' replied she, 'no corn bread to-day.' 'Well, friends, we will go back into the parlor and wait until Sister Jones makes her corn bread.' She made it."

Another thing of which Col. Vawter was very fond was coffee. He always carried his favorite kind around with him and would ask the lady of the house to make him a cup. The one who made the coffee exactly right stood very high in his favor.

Col. Vawter was also very particular about his person. He had a clean shave every morning and bathed his feet every night before going to bed.

"Chief among the peculiarities of Col. Vawter was an intense antipathy to dogs and to tobacco. If a friend called at his home, who had unfortunately allowed his dog to follow him, he was left standing at the door with outstretched hand while his host gave chase to the dog and securely fastened it without the gate. He sometimes descended from the lofty pulpit in the old Baptist Church, in the midst of his sermon, in pursuit of an unlucky canine that had chanced to wander in. He would chase it around

*This fourth marriage took place soon after the death of the third wife. When John T. Vawter, a grandson, was written to for the purpose of finding whether the dates were correct or not, he replied: "There is no mistake. I went with the Colonel, my grandfather, when he asked Mrs. Pearce to marry him, and they were married in five or six days thereafter.

and out the door, then would mount the steps and go on preaching as if that were part of his program.

"At the Association once in Vernon, Col. Vawter, who was very hospitable, said: 'Now I have a new house out here and I want you all to come to my house for dinner. I will entertain you every one and you are welcome, but I don't want any one to bring dogs or to spit on my clean floors.' "

Wm. H. McCoy, of Franklin, used to live in Vernon and knew Col. Vawter there. He told this anecdote: "Col. Vawter was opposed to collections for missions. He didn't believe in missions. At the Association, which met in Vernon, there was present Mr. Crabb, who was the state collector for missions. On Saturday before the Sunday service some of the ministers wanted to vote that a collection for missions should be taken up. 'No, no,' said Col. Vawter, 'I will leave if you do.' The matter was dropped. The next day there were a number of ministers on the platform to speak. Col. Vawter was always the man to take a nap just whenever and wherever he wanted to. While one of the ministers was speaking Col. Vawter dropped off behind the platform, lay down on a log and went to sleep. Mr. Crabb observed this. He spoke next, cut his remarks short and asked that a collection be taken for missions, and it was. When the minutes of the Association were read, the secretary said: 'and a collection for missions was taken.' 'Hold on,' said Col. Vawter, 'no such thing!' 'Yes,' said the others, the collection was taken while you were asleep.' 'What next?' said Col. Vawter."

General Breckinridge of Minnesota, talking to Williamson Vawter, told this anecdote about Col. John Vawter, whom he knew. He said: "Vernon was famous in the early history of the country for its courts. There was at North Vernon at that time a well-known Irish lawyer. Col. Vawter was subpoenaed on two cases being tried by this lawyer. He was a witness on the side the lawyer wished to win in one case and a witness on the side the lawyer did not wish to win in the other case. The lawyer, in summing up the first case, said: 'And who is this Col. John Vawter? He is the marshal of the Territory of Indiana, founder of Vernon and defender of the oppressed.' In summing up the second case, he said: 'Who is this old John Vawter? He is the hireling of the United States Government, the nabob of Vernon and a secrater of nagers.' "

"A Hoosier was traveling in Michigan, and, while stopping at a hotel, incidentally revealed the fact that he originally lived in southern Indiana. The landlord quickly inquired of his guest whether or not he knew Col. John Vawter, of Vernon, to which question the boarder replied in the affirmative. 'Then I must tell you my first impression of Col. Vawter,' said the landlord. 'In an early day, before the railroad was built, I was traveling from Madison to Vernon, and, nearing the town of Vernon, I saw a surveyor and his chain carrier, working near the road. I inquired for a place in Vernon where I could stop for the night and have my horse stabled and fed. The surveyor at once kindly told me where the boarding-house was located, and said that a man there would take care of my horse. At supper time the surveyor and his gang came in and I soon learned that the man with the compass was the proprietor of the hotel. After supper I asked directions to a store. The landlord said that he would walk up town with me. Upon arriving at the store I found a general stock of goods, and then learned that my escort was owner and proprietor of the establishment. While I was puzzling my brain as to how one man could attend to so many different vocations, Colonel Vawter asked me if I would like to go to church. I went, and you may imagine my utter astonishment on reaching the church to see the man I had already thought overburdened with business walk into the pulpit and preach a most able sermon. That night I walked home with a surveyor, landlord, merchant and minister, but Col. John Vawter was the only man with me.' "

A copy of the inscription on the tombstone of John Vawter at Morgantown, Ind., follows. It was composed by John Vawter himself:

With all his Titles.

Here lies the remains of

ELDER JOHN VAWTER.

Born in old Virginia—

Jan. 8.—1782;

Died Aug. 17, 1862;

The effort of his long life as a
Christian was to nourish and build up
The true Christian Church on the Original Apostolic foundation.

As a statesman he was a progressive Conservative, believing The state Legislature held the great material
Interest of the body politic in its Hands; that the prosperity of the State
In education, agriculture, internal Improvements, mechanical arts, finance
And commerce could be advanced by
Judicious, or retarded and crypted
By unwise Legislation.—

LETTERS WRITTEN BY JOHN VAWTER TO HIS BROTHER,
WILLIAM VAWTER.

VERNON, 25 October, 1828.

BROTHER WILLIAM—I send you by your son $2.56 cts., the amount of your hauling (by Taylor Vawter). I heard news when in that was to me unexpected and unpleasant. It was that you were disposed to absent yourself from meeting and had done so in one case; that you had said that some of your friends were your enemies. If this be true, you are in a state of mind that is far from enviable; you are, in short, childish and wrong and do not know it. My dear brother, it is too hard. Let me pray you not to reproach your friends by thinking or saying they are enemies, and above all, not to lessen that favorable station you hold in the good opinions of your brethren wherever you are known. It is much easier to lose a good name than to gain it. You have been laboring for your's upwards of twenty-five years, and now do not destroy it by any improper course, such as you may rest assured you will do by absenting yourself from meeting.

I would advise you to ever lie at the feet of your brethren as the proper place. I have done so for years, otherwise I would have been expelled from society long ago, for many only wished me so to act that they might have wherewith to charge me. I now enjoy much comfort with my brethren, and so may you should you not want to be chief. You must not ask others to look through your eyes, and you must remember that the Redeemer did not refuse to eat with publicans and sinners, yea, with one who denied Him, yes, with one who betrayed Him. All this is a lesson to proud you and me to do likewise. We are not to judge hearts, and be assured we have nothing to boast of ourselves. I have never seen the time when I could not meet with such as could meet with me, poor me, and could always partake of the supper with all who could with me.

Let me pray you now, as a brother who truly loves and has admired your prudent, Christian conduct heretofore, to stop, pause and think what injury you are doing yourself, how you are detracting from your own good name and sinking your family connections by neglecting your solemn church covenant. My brother, you must fall at the feet of your brethren and there remain. I speak freely, because I believe you delight in honesty and plain dealing, and let no word I say break in on that good understanding that has so long subsisted between us.

Respectfully, your brother,

JOHN VAWTER.

MORGANTOWN, INDIANA, 3d October, 1858.

BROTHER WILLIAM VAWTER—On Saturday morning I left home for the purpose of coming to see you and family. On arriving at Vernon heard you had been able to go about, then went on to Madison, intending to visit you on Monday. On reaching Vernon again found you had been able to visit your daughter, Frances, and finding I could save a day, took the freight train and went on to Indianapolis. Returned home last evening. While about, visited Hickman Branham, Newton Vawter, Brother Jenkins, his mother being there, and Brother James (who sends you this minute), Brother Abner Moncrief and Brother Wise. Attended meeting on Sunday at Harbert's Creek in company with Brother James Vawter and our only two living sisters. Four out of the six of us now living were together at one time, and that where father, mother and one sister were buried—a thing I never expect to occur again in my lifetime.

I heard Brother Henderson preach a sermon which affected my whole internal man. Oh! it was a soul-stirring sermon, worthy of being admired by all God's dear children. I do not suppose I ever will forget it. Brother Thomas Hill was there. We dined together at Moncrief's, suppered, lodged and breakfasted together at Matthew Wise's.

We are all well, and so are my children, who are here. Jane Storey and her Emma are here for to-day, by whom I send you this letter and minute.

Affectionately yours,

JOHN VAWTER.

MORGANTOWN, INDIANA, 2d February, 1859.

BROTHER WILLIAM VAWTER—Your letter of the 31st January, 1859, came to hand to-day, for which accept my thanks. I only got home on Monday evening from my visit and meetings. I have been for four days and five nights off with a bad cold, mostly located in my head. It did seem as if my eyes and nose had the consumption and would waste my whole life away by constant running. Cold brought on by walking from Shelbyville, some twelve or fourteen miles, after 2 o'clock, to Brother Hurst's by 7 o'clock. I had to walk, as the Rushville railroad cars failed that day to make a trip. I went to see my cousin, Sally Hurst. She is suffering very much with a cough and cold; looks very poor. I very much doubt whether I will ever see her again. Old Brother Hurst is as well as when I saw him in May last to all appearances.

I do not recollect whether I wrote you that I did receive a letter from Jephtha Vawter not long since. He wrote me fully about himself, family and children, brothers, sisters and father. We do commonly write each other about twice a year. It does me good to hear from him and his friends. They were all in common good health when he wrote me.

I am sorry you did not write me about Brother Allen Park's daughter. I am anxious to hear from her. Hope she will do well. We are generally well here. Hope these lines will find you and all the friends well or improving at least.

Believe us as ever your friends, yours.

JOHN VAWTER.

MORGANTOWN, INDIANA, 12th June, 1862.

ELDER WILLIAM VAWTER: DEAR BROTHER—Yours of the 8th instant at hand to-day, for which you have my sincere thanks. We are glad that you have it in contemplation to visit us, and hope that health and everything else will favor your effort to come at the time named in your letter, say the 20th of this month. I do expect to leave here to-morrow in order to attend meeting at Amity on Saturday and Sunday next, it being their regular meeting days. From Amity I will go to Indianapolis, if my health permits, so as to be at the convention on Wednesday, the 18th of the month. I may leave Indianapolis for home on Wednesday evening or Thursday morning, so as to come home on Thursday the 19th of this month, but my every movement depends on my health.

Since I saw you I have visited Franklin, Indianapolis, Sharpsville (saw your granddaughter), Vernon, Columbus and Rush county. Saw my old cousin, Sally Hurst. She is greatly afflicted with rheumatism. Old Brother Hurst is suffering, as I am, with continual pain in the head. Emmons, his son, is afflicted with a bad disease of the throat, bronchitis I do suppose. Daniel Webster Pearce came home from Franklin two or three days since, down with chills and fever. Our last news from Thomas Allen Pearce he was well and near Corinth in Mississippi. He says all our boys that went from here with him are well. I do not know where the Story boys are now. The last accounts they were in Missouri. It is said that our boys that went from here and wintered on the Potomac (a part of them) failed to stand up to the work at Winchester in the late retreat under Banks. Banks deserves great credit for having managed his retreat so well.

Will you write us if anything intervenes to prevent your coming? Friends here all well.

I am, as ever, your friend and brother,

JOHN VAWTER.

I.

SMITH VAWTER

Smith Vawter, the son of John and Polly (Smith) Vawter, was born in Scott county, Kentucky, November 3, 1806. His father was born in Orange county, Virginia, and his mother was born in Pennsylvania. His father's family moved to Indiana Territory in 1807, making the first encampment near where the railroad roundhouse now stands in North Madison. Smith Vawter lived in Madison for eight years and then moved with his father to Vernon. He rose from ensign to the command of the Twenty-first Regiment Indiana Militia; was elected sheriff in 1834; county commissioner in 1848, and again in 1856; was a representative in the lower house of the Indiana legislature from Jennings county in the sessions of 1848 and 1856; was the joint representative from Jennings and Scott counties in the session of 1878-9; was the joint representative from Jefferson and Jennings counties in the session of 1879-80. He was one of the trustees of the Agricultural Fund (Purdue University) for five years; was a merchant and a farmer for more than forty years, and for the last years of his life was credited with occupying his time principally with paying security debts for his friends. He also gave much to charity. (Almost all of the above was taken from Biographical Sketches of Members of the Indiana State Government of 1879-80.)

Col. Smith Vawter was a peculiar character, as was his father before him, but all the more interesting on that account. Lewis Wagner, of Vernon, who knew Smith Vawter well and married one of his cousins, said: "The older Vawters were all peculiar people and very stubborn, but good, honest people—people one could depend on."

"Smith Vawter was a pork packer, a dry goods merchant, had a woolen mill and also a flouring mill. He used to slaughter hogs which ran wild in the woods about Vernon, put them on a flat-boat and take them to New Orleans and trade for molasses and other groceries. It took weeks and weeks to go to New Orleans then. Afterwards Colonel Vawter owned a steamboat. He was exceedingly fond of corn bread, and on one trip to New Orleans the bread gave out. Smith Vawter stopped the boat and went off in the woods to see if he couldn't find some corn bread at a near-by house. He was gone so long that the men grew uneasy and went to look for him. They found him sitting in front of a cabin waiting for a darky to bake some bread. Four hours of time for every one on the steamboat was lost while Colonel Vawter secured his corn bread. It was said that when he went to the legislature at Indianapolis he always took his corn bread with him."

Smith Vawter was very independent. He did not like to be under obligations to any one. He never would accept a railroad pass. He never sought office for himself, but liked to be consulted about plans for others. During the Civil War he spent much of his money and time in helping the wives and children of those who went to the front.

When Col. Smith Vawter lived on the farm across the creek from Vernon he was at one time sick. He wanted some medicine. He asked some one to go and get it for him. The creek was very high and the one asked said it wouldn't be safe to try to cross it. That made Colonel Vawter angry, and he got up, went to the barn, mounted his old mouse-colored horse, swam the creek and got his own medicine.

When Richard Stott had a tannery not far from the farm of Smith Vawter his hogs kept coming over on Mr. Vawter's farm and annoying him. His darky said: "W'at you-all gwyin' do wid dose hogs?" "Shoot 'em, shoot 'em, shoot 'em!" said Colonel Vawter, "I'll pay for them." The darky did shoot them, and Smith Vawter paid for them without a word.

"When Colonel Vawter was in Indianapolis attending the sessions of the legislature he was walking along near the Circle late at night. A man stepped up very close to him and said: 'Could you tell me the time?' Colonel Vawter thought the man intended to steal his watch. He stepped back toward the lamp-post, raised his cane, which was very heavy, and said: 'Yes, sir; it is time both you and I were in bed.' The man seemed to agree with him, for he was not slow about moving on."

Smith Vawter was married five times and had twelve children. He was married first, April 21, 1829, to Jane Terrell. Their children were John Terrell Vawter and Hickman N. Vawter. Jane (Terrell) Vawter was born January 15, 1811; died September 29, 1834.

(1) John Terrell Vawter, son of Smith and Jane (Terrell) Vawter, was born January 15, 1830, in Vernon, Indiana. At the age of seventeen he was employed as a salesman in his father's store of general merchandise at $16 per month, he to board himself. When nineteen years old his salary was raised to $20 per month. He remained in his father's employ until August, 1851, when, with S. W. Storey (his wife's brother), he opened a drug store in Franklin. Mr. Storey only remained until the following February, John T. Vawter continuing the business for about sixteen years, then selling a part interest to Mr. Ephraim Jeffry. In 1869 John T. Vawter sold his interest in the drug store to Mr. McCoy, and with George F. Harriott built and operated a large pork-house in Franklin. After two years they took Messrs. Branagan and Featheringill into the firm. In 1876 the business was discontinued, John T. Vawter going to his farm at Vawter Park, in Northern Indiana. From the year 1859 he was in the Indiana Farmers' Bank for some time, and afterwards, for twenty years, in the Second National Bank of Franklin. On the expiration of the charter he, with others, organized the Franklin Bank. In 1884 he was elected president of the Franklin Bank and accepted the position for three years only and on condition that he be given the privilege of converting it into a national bank, which was done in May, 1885. He is the largest stockholder in said Franklin National Bank and also one of the directors.

John T. Vawter once kept seven sets of books at the same time in Franklin. He was a good penman, quick in figures and not given to making mistakes. His father was the same, and the Terrells, on his mother's side, were experts, Gen. W. H. H. Terrell perhaps the best.

John T. Vawter was married in 1850 to his cousin Mary Story, who was born April 21, 1831. They had no children of their own, but in the year 1862 they took a little girl whose mother was dead, and later on adopted her. Smith Vawter, the father of John, thought a great deal of the father and mother of the child and wished his son to take her. The child was known as Clara Vawter. She attended Franklin High School, then Butler College, at Irvington, and finally, in 1880, the Female College at Oxford, Ohio. She was married December 22, 1881, to Lafayette Pence, and died in Denver, Colorado, December 17, 1885. Her husband, who was born and reared in Columbus, Indiana, was at the time of her death a member of the state legislature of Colorado, and since her death has been a member of congress. Clara Vawter Pence left only one living child, Lafayette Vawter Pence, who was born March 14, 1884, and who is now pursuing his studies in Ilion, New York.

John T. Vawter has been a member of the Church of Christ in Vernon, and now in Franklin, for about sixty years. His wife died March 4, 1900. If living she would have been a member for about the same length of time. His daughter, Clara, united with the Church of Christ when fourteen years of age.

(2) Hickman N., son of Smith and Jane (Terrell) Vawter, was born July 9, 1832. He was graduated at Hanover at about sixteen or seventeen years of age. He was of a very daring disposition and something of a rover. His father was remonstrating with him one day because he did not stay in the same place, and said: "My son, you know the rolling stone gathers no moss." "No," replied the son, "nor does the setting hen grow fat."

Lewis Wagner, of Vernon, who knew Hickman well, said that he was very brilliant and also very proud. He wrote a paper called the "Man About Town" and printed it. Once a month it was tacked up on the trees and public buildings. The people were very curious about it, but for many months were unable to find out who did it.

One evening Hickman asked a young woman of Vernon to allow him to take her home from church. She refused. He was very much astonished and said over and over to Lewis Wagner: "Well, now, what do you think of that? A harnessmaker's daughter refuses to walk home with Col. Smith Vawter's son." Hickman Vawter died at the age of twenty-two years.

Smith Vawter's second wife was his cousin, Elizabeth Smith. They were married January 8, 1835. Elizabeth S. Vawter was born in 1806 and died February 2, 1839. Their children were Samuel and Mary Jane.

(3) Samuel Logan, son of Smith and Elizabeth Vawter, was born January 20, 1836, at Vernon, Indiana. When quite a boy he clerked in the drug store of his brother, John T. Vawter, in Franklin, Indiana. A few years later, he bought a drug store at Martinsville, Indiana. In the year 1859 he went to St. Anthony, Minnesota, where he owned a drug store. In a few years he and his partner moved to St. Paul, Minnesota, where they started the first wholesale drug house in the northwest. Samuel Vawter was married December 16, 1856, at Franklin, Indiana, to Maria L. Bright, who was born at Franklin, March 18, 1837. Their children were Irene, Mary and Charles. Samuel Vawter died January 15, 1868.

a. Irene E. Vawter, daughter of Samuel and Maria B. Vawter, was born in Martinsville, Indiana, September 24, 1857. She was married October 17, 1878, at Franklin, Indiana, to George Caldwell Banta. Mr. Banta was born at Hopewell, Indiana, and has lived there all of his life, except ten years which were spent in Franklin in the drug business. The children of George and Irene Banta were:

(a) Maria, born February 8, 1880; died July 11, 1880, at Franklin, Indiana.

(b) Clara Vawter, born September 13, 1881; died February 23, 1903, at Hopewell, Indiana.

Mr. Smith, who was born in Lewistown, Indiana, January 16, 1859, is principal of the New Jersey Academy, Logan, Utah. The school is under the direction of the Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church.

Smith Vawter's third wife was Spicy Carroll, to whom he was married January 28, 1840. Their children were Edwin, Emily, Sarah, Ezra and George. Spicy (Carroll) Vawter was born February 25, 1817, and died July 30, 1848.

JANE (VAWTER) STOREY

Jane, daughter of John and Polly (Smith) Vawter, was born July 17, 1809, in Kentucky, and was married June 25, 1825, to Thomas J. Storey, the son of John Storey. John Storey was of Irish parentage. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and also in the War of 1812. He had a large family of children, many of them sons, and all of these were soldiers at one time or another. Thomas J. Storey, his son, was in the War of 1812. He enlisted at Georgetown, Kentucky, in a volunteer company commanded by Captain Metcalf, and at once went into active military service. He was in the battle fought near the foot of the rapids of the Maumee river, in which Colonel Dudley, commanding, was overpowered by the combined British and Indian forces under Procter and Tecumseh. Out of a regiment of nearly one thousand as brave men as ever marched from Kentucky less than one hundred and fifty made good their retreat to a place of safety by a column charge through the lines of the enemy. All the rest were scalped, tomahawked, butchered and burned by the Indians. Subsequent to this Mr. Storey was in the battles and sorties incident to the siege of Fort Meigs and at the close of the war in the Northwest he was honorably discharged.

After the return of Thomas Storey from the War of 1812, he was married to Miss Span, who lived only a year, dying at the birth of a daughter, who lived to be three years old. Thomas Storey then settled in Vernon, Indiana, about the year 1820, as a house builder. There he met Jane Vawter, with whom he fell in love. It was soon after the death of her mother, and the proposal of the young widower was met with a decided refusal, as the loving daughter was "going to stay with father and care for and comfort him forever." It was not long, however, until the father sought comfort elsewhere, and Jane, meeting her quondam lover after the announcement of her father's coming marriage, whispered rather sadly: "Mr. Storey, if you have not changed your mind, I—I have mine." Her extreme modesty and shy reserve made these words seem so out of keeping with her character that they have been remembered. Their marriage was a happy one and their lives, looked back upon, seem uneventful. They lived for their children and tried to teach them to love God and their country. Three of the boys were in the army of the North, and any soldier in need of a home was always made welcome at Thomas Storey's. The mother's dying words were a prayer for country and children. Jane (Vawter) Storey died March 8, 1864.

Thomas Storey was married, third, to Miss Louisa Hall of Madison, Indiana, in 1867. She is now living in Vernon. Mr. Storey died July 16, 1878, at the age of eighty-two years, an old man, still full of interest in all current events.

Thomas J. and Jane (Vawter) Storey had ten children: John, Emily, Mary, Smith William, David, Thomas Henry, James Marshall, Riley Clark, George W. and Emma Julia.

(1) John Vawter Storey, son of Thomas J. and Jane (Vawter) Storey, was born December 17, 1826, and was married March 15, 1846, in Vernon, at the home of Col. They had six children: Martha Jane, William David, Ezra, Cora V., Frank and Charles.

f. Charles, son of John V. and Mary Storey, was born October 16, 1859.

John V. Storey was married, second, to Mrs. Addie Moore of Bartholomew, Indiana, November 28, 1874. Mr. Storey began his business career as a druggist. Is now retired. He and his wife live at Columbus, Indiana.

(2) Emily Vawter Storey, daughter of Thomas J. and Jane (Vawter) Storey, was born December 12, 1828, and died July 20, 1842.

(3) Mary Vawter Storey, daughter of Thomas J. and Jane (Vawter) Storey, was born April 21, 1831; married in 1850 to John T. Vawter; died March 21, 1900. No children.

(4) Smith William, son of Thomas J. and Jane (Vawter) Storey, was born in Vernon, Indiana, December 23, 1833. While a mere youth, he made the overland trip to the Pacific, driving an ox wagon, and for several years endured the hardships and dangers of a frontiersman and miner in California and Oregon. Returning to Vernon, he engaged in the drug business, in which he continued until his death. S. William Storey was an elder in the Vernon Presbyterian Church; was superintendent of the Sunday-school for twenty-five years; was an organizer and promoter of the first bank in Vernon; was a director, and from 1895 until his death was president of the First National Bank. He was married May 17, 1860, to Martha E. Wise, who was the daughter of Copeland, the son of Matthew and Julia (Vawter) Wise. There was one daughter, Kate, who was born October 8, 1861, and married October 16, 1884, to Lincoln Dixon. Mr. Dixon was born February 9, 1860, and is an attorney-at-law of North Vernon, Indiana, and has recently been elected to congress.

Children of Lincoln and Kate (Storey) Dixon: Esther Claire, born December 16, 1887; Donald Storey, born October 6, 1890; Dorothy, born April 3, 1900.

Martha W. Storey, the wife of S. William Storey, died August 28, 1889. She was a woman of great loveliness of character, and is remembered with the sincerest affection by her many friends.

S. William Storey was married, second, to Lena Carlisle, December 11, 1890. Lena Carlisle was born June 10, 1864. Children: Blanche, born September 14, 1891, and S. William, Jr., born December 27, 1893.

S. William Storey died October 7, 1903.

(5) David, son of Thomas J. and Jane (Vawter) Storey, was born June 27, 1836, and died December 5, 1842.

(6) Thomas Henry Storey, son of Thomas J. and Jane (Vawter) Storey, was born July 18, 1838, and was married to Titia Sharp in Kansas in 1881. No children. Thomas H. Storey had a stroke of paralysis during the last year of the Civil War and was discharged on account of it, never entirely recovering from the effects. He was totally blind for eight years before his death, which occurred January 23, 1890. His widow is living.

(7) James Marshall, son of Thomas J. and Jane (Vawter) Storey, was born in Vernon, Indiana, October 17, 1840. During the Civil War he was mustered into service as a private of Company H, Twenty-sixth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, August 3, 1861; was made sergeant of company June 27, 1862; lieutenant, July 20, 1863; captain, June 19, 1865. He was aide-de-camp to Brigadier General Vandiver from July 25, 1863 to October 14, 1863; served under Gen. Fremont, in his campaign in Missouri in 1862, after the rebel Gen. Price was wounded in the forehead at the battle of Prairie Grove, Arkansas, December 7, 1862; was in the siege of Vicksburg; the taking of Brownsville, Texas, in the latter part of 1863; the siege of Spanish Fort from investment to capitulation April 9, 1865; the taking of Montgomery, Alabama, April 25, 1865. (8) Riley Clark Storey, son of Thomas J. and Jane (Vawter) Storey, was born December 18, 1842, in Vernon, Indiana. As a lad he was a book-lover and of a studious disposition. It is said that he left home at one time to follow a favorite teacher to Indianapolis, where he sold papers in order to pay his tuition and other expenses. He was in college at Franklin, Indiana, when the war broke out. He enlisted in the Eighteenth Indiana Volunteers. After his discharge he entered the University of Michigan and graduated from that institution with the famous class of '69. While in the university he, with others, organized the local chapter of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. After graduating, he entered a law school in Indianapolis, from which he received the degree of LL. B. later.

MARION VAWTER

Marion Vawter, son of John and Ruth (Minton) Vawter, was born November 30, 1830, at Vernon, Indiana. When about eighteen or twenty years of age he, with his father, his brother and sister, moved to Morgantown, Indiana. His early employment was as roadmaster of the Franklin and Martinsville Railroad. He moved, with his family, to Indianapolis in 1860, and was employed in the Madison and Indianapolis Railroad machine shops for four or five years, having charge of the shops the last two years. In 1865 the road was consolidated with the Jeffersonville Railroad, and Marion Vawter then secured a position in the Eagle machine shops for a short time, then with D. Root & Co., foundry and machine shops, where he was employed several years. He resigned from this position, and with Benjamin J. Smith, former master mechanic of the Madison and Indianapolis Railroad, started a machine and repair shop at Spencer, Indiana. This venture did not prove a success, and he returned to D. Root & Co., and afterwards to the Sinker, Davis & Co. machine shops, where he was employed until his death in 1880.

Marion Vawter was married January 28, 1851, at Morgantown, Indiana, to Rebecca Mahafy, who was born March 6, 1832, in Maryville, Ohio, and is now living at Lafayette, Indiana. Their children were: (1) Charles Minton; (2) William Riley; (3) Mary Emily, and (4) Jesse Segal.

(1) Charles Minton Vawter, son of Marion and Rebecca (Mahafy) Vawter, was born at Morgantown, Indiana, February 28, 1853. Charles Vawter probably is acquainted with more of the Vawter relatives than any other one in the whole connection. He has been greatly interested in the history of the Vawter family, and to him is due the preservation of much of the history of his grandfather which has been given in this account.

A short sketch of Charles M. Vawter, taken from a letter written by himself, is here reproduced.

"I, Charles Minton Vawter, moved from Morgantown, Indiana, with my father, to Indianapolis, in 1860, and attended the public schools there until 1865 or 1866. I then secured employment with my uncle, John Allan Vawter, on his huckster wagon, which ran between Indianapolis and Morgantown. While with my uncle I formed the acquaintance of one Mr. Bently, a tin pedler, who secured me the job of running a wagon for J. J. Smith & Co., 108 South Delaware street, Indianapolis. The company was running twenty wagons. This was the first good job for me, and paid $26.00 a month and expenses.

"On October 2 I started out with my tin wagon and ran it until 1872. On June 9 of 1872 I went to Lafayette and ran a wagon for Robert Manning & Co. until November 22 of the same year. On this date I secured a position as brakeman on the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago Railway, making my first trip to Bloomington, Indiana. In 1874 I was promoted to train baggage-master. In December, 1876, I was promoted to a freight conductor. In 1879 I had an accident which caused me to lose my position. I then started a restaurant in Michigan City and ran it until I lost what little money I had. I then went back on the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago road. Soon after, my wife's health failing, I resigned and took care of her until her death. In March of that year I secured a position as freight conductor on the Wabash Railroad, between Moberly, Missouri, and St. Louis. My mother and son Fred, aged six, were with me while there. I left the Wabash January 1, 1884, and returned to the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago as local freight conductor. In March, 1886, I lost my position, owing to a change of officers. From March to August I was in the produce business at Bloomington, Indiana, having moved there from Lafayette. In July I called on Mr. Bent at Cincinnati, who employed me as local freight conductor, running between Seymour, Indiana, and Cincinnati. I then moved from Bloomington to Seymour. In 1888 I was promoted to extra passenger conductor, and in September, 1889, to a regular passenger train between Louisville and North Vernon. I then moved to New Albany. In 1897 I began running between Louisville and Cincinnati, moving to Home City, Ohio. At present I am running between Cincinnati and St. Louis."

WILLIAM VAWTER

William Vawter, the son of Jesse, was born April 2, 1783, in the Holston country, near where North Carolina, East Tennessee and Virginia now join. Because of the hardships to be endured in the new country, and because he was a twin, the parents of William Vawter left him in Virginia with his maternal grandparents when they were there on a visit. He was about two years old at the time and he remained with his grandfather and grandmother Watts until seven years of age.

William Vawter himself, in writing of this period of his life, says :

“In the fall of 1790 my father and mother moved to Kentucky and there I was brought up. In the eighteenth year of my age I was struck under conviction for my sins, and I labored very hard in my own way to bring God under obligation to save me for my works, but, instead of getting any nearer heaven, I seemed to get farther off, and I continued so for months. At last I concluded that there was no mercy for me, that I was a reprobate, and it increased my trouble. I could not see any way that God could save such a sinner as I was unless He changed, and I did not wish Him to change to save me. His law said : ‘The soul that sins, it shall die.’ I looked for death from day to day, so you see my trouble was great.

“Late in November, 1800, I retired to condole over my lost condition, for I had concluded that there was no mercy for me, as I had tried every way I could think of to humble myself so as to bring God under obligation to save me from a burning hell, and He seemed to be angry with me all the time. I could not see how He could save such a sinner as I was, and yet I wanted to be saved if it could be done on the principles of justice. Then, all of a sudden, it came into my mind: 'The will of the Lord be done,' and as soon as I gave myself up the trouble was all gone, and all creation seemed to be praising God. I felt like I had been asleep all my life before. This happiness did not last long. I had not gotten what I was in search of. I could not get it. I know there was a great change in my feelings about that time, but that was not religion.

"In about a month after I went to the church to see if they could tell me how to get religion, and to my great surprise they received me as a fit subject for baptism. I could not receive myself, but I studied on it for a month and then yielded to the judgment of the church and was baptized by old Father Hickman in North Elkhorn. He was the pastor of the church called McConnel's Run in Scott county, Kentucky. After this there was a church constitution in father's house called North Fork. I remained in that church for about five years until father lost his land because of a defective title. We built us a frame meeting-house.

"My father now made up his mind to locate in Indiana Territory, and I agreed to assist him in making a settlement. We moved to Mount Glad, near Madison, Indiana, in 1806. In 1807 there was a Baptist Church constitution in father's house called Crooked Creek, afterwards changed to Mount Pleasant. On the first day of January, 1809, I married Frances Vawter, the daughter of Philemon (the brother of Jesse) and Anna Vawter, and in 1829 we moved to Jennings county and joined the Vernon Church. In 1835 there was a new constitution called Zoar, where my membership is at this time. I have been in three constitutions and belonged to five Baptist churches. In the last named church I was set apart by fasting, prayer and the imposition of hands to administer the ordinances of the Gospel."

William Vawter was of a retiring nature. Although firm in his notions of men and public policy, he never engaged actively in politics and was no office seeker. In Jefferson county, on some few occasions, he accepted office in the civil department, and during the Indian troubles of 1811 and 1812 he was a captain of the militia, but on the return of peace he resigned the office. From his ordination William Vawter devoted all the time he could spare from domestic affairs and farm duties to preaching and the building up of the churches. He never received money as compensation for his labors, and his house was ever open to the entertainment of strangers, friends and brethren.

For six years before his death William Vawter lived with his daughter, Frances V. King, and his wife, Frances, lived there for one year longer. William died on Friday morning, July 17, 1868, aged eighty-five years, three months and fifteen days. The funeral sermon was preached on the Saturday following his death to a large congregation of friends and relatives by Elder Thomas Hill from these words: "And I heard a voice from Heaven saying unto me: Write, Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth. Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." (Rev. 14: 13.)

Frances Vawter, wife of William, was born August 11, 1787, and died October 26, 1869. They were both buried at the Vawter cemetery, three and a half miles from North Vernon, Indiana. Philemon and Anna, the father and mother of Frances, were also buried there. Jesse and Elizabeth, the father and mother of William Vawter, were buried at Harbert's Creek, near Madison.

William Vawter left six sons and three daughters, one daughter, Maria Burns, having died many years before.

Frances V. King, the daughter of William Vawter, gave in substance the following:

"When father first came to Indiana he tended his father's farm, living in a log house on the hill. He first went to housekeeping in the bottom near Madison, Indiana, afterwards owning a farm at Mt. Pleasant. He had two places in Madison, and wished to move there, but mother was opposed to living in town with her boys, and so they continued to live at Mt. Pleasant until they moved to Jennings county in 1829, where Uncle John and Uncle Achilles Vawter had already gone. Father traded his farm at Mt. Pleasant to a man by the name of George for land near Vernon. Here our family lived for many years. The old house is still standing. It is situated on the bank of the Muscatatack, about three and a half miles out from North Vernon. The house was a good one for the time. The following drawing, though not exactly accurate in dimensions, perhaps, will yet serve to give a general idea of the plan of the house:

"Father afterwards entered two hundred or more acres near the home place. He preached many years, receiving no compensation therefor, but depending on the farm for the living. He was much interested in education, and gave money to the founding of Franklin College. Mother was a great reader. She liked to read novels, and when she grew so deaf that she could not understand the conversation of those around her, her reading was a great comfort to her. She always took a number of papers."

Harrison Burns, a grandson of William and Frances Vawter,

HOMESTEAD OF WILLIAM VAWTER
NEAR VERNON, INDIANA

lived at his grandfather's house for some time after the death of his mother. In recalling old times, he said :

"Grandmother had an old horse named Fanny which was kept especially for her use. Grandfather's horse was named Farmer. I used to be sent to town to mail a letter to the boys at college or to get one. Uncle Achilles Vawter was postmaster at Vernon then. It cost five cents to send a letter. There were no stamps. The letter could be paid for in advance or paid for by the one who received it. When a letter was sent to the boys, grandfather always sent five cents along to pay for it. When he sent for a letter from the boys, he also had to pay for that, as they were on short allowance.

"As the children grew up and married, a number of them located near the old place. These were Jesse Vawter, John T. Stott, who married Elizabeth Vawter, George King, who married Frances Vawter, and Ormand Feagler, who married Mary Vawter. Before his death grandfather gave forty acres of land or equal value to each child, and at his death left $153 to each. Probably not more than $100 in money was handled by any one of those families at that time in the course of the year. They raised all of their meat and vegetables and fruits and took butter and eggs to town and traded for sugar, coffee and other groceries. From the wool of the sheep the women spun the yarn and then they wove the cloth and made all of the clothing except, perhaps, a greatcoat for grandfather or a best dress for grandmother. It was very seldom that a new article of furniture was bought.

"At first the cooking was all done by the fireplace, and later a kitchen stove was bought. They all lived well. At George King's there was always an abundant table and a hearty welcome. George King had a buckwheat field and a sugar camp, and when the time came for buckwheat cakes there were great heaps of them baked on a griddle at the fireplace, and syrup there was in plenty. At John Stott's they often entertained great numbers of guests. The church was near their house, and the association met at that church, and sometimes they would have as many as seventy-five people to dinner. They would set the tables out in the yard.

"There was an old orchard extending from grandfather's house to the graveyard, and not far from the house were two springs from which all the water for the house was carried. The farms were located in reference to springs, and even towns were sometimes so located. Probably when the Vawter brothers came to Jennings county they did not push on still farther where they could find yet better land because of the Indians. At that time there were a great many of them. The militia was organized for protection in every district. Grandfather was a captain of the militia, and John Vawter was a colonel. Neither of them saw any active service."

In an old memorandum book of William Vawter's the following items were found:

May 7, 1849, we went to Vernon and got a tight-air stove and paid $11.05 towards it.

June 13, paid $7 more.

August 29, paid $4 more.

October 17, paid $17 more.

December 15, paid $13 more.

February 7, 1850, squared the books at W. D. Vawter & Co. and we are even.

WILLIAM VAWTER.

(Cost of that stove was more than $52.05, as it is not known how much the last payment amounted to.)

Done at Zoar Church at the business meeting on the fourth Saturday in July, 1839.

JOHN BUSH,
WILLIAM T. STOTT,
CALEB MONCRIEF,
Elders.

Attested by JOHN STOTT, Clerk.

William Vawter made three wills. The first of these was made March 16, 1835, and is as follows:

In the name of Almighty God, Amen.

I, William Vawter, the writer of the foregoing, being in my proper mind and in good health and yet knowing not when I may die, as all life is uncertain, wish that my children should have an equal part in the distribution of my property. I think proper, therefore, to set forth under each name the amount each one has received and what remains to be divided as they become of age.

When all my debts are paid there will be on hand after my death $300.00 (three hundred dollars) in cash and the remainder of lot No. 41 west, in first addition to Madison, Jefferson county, Indiana; also thirty acres of land in the south end of the west half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-six of town seven north, and range eight east, of the lands sold at Jeffersonville and lying on the south side of the north fork of the Muscatatack river; also ten acres adjoining and lying in the southeast corner of the southwest quarter of section twenty-six of town seven north, range eight east, of the land sold at Jeffersonville.

It is my will and desire that the remainder of my estate be for the benefit of my widow for her comfort and support during her lifetime and that of the children who are under age and remain with her. After her death, and when the youngest child becomes of age, I wish an equal distribution of what remains of my property to be made among my ten children.

My estate left for the use of my widow and the children under age consists of the following property, viz.: The tract of land I now live on, consisting of two hundred and eighty acres of land, with the farm, dwelling-house, outhouses, household and kitchen furniture, barn, grain, horses, cattle, hogs, sheep, farming tools and all tools of every description indoors and outdoors, and all my books, etc.

I do hereby ordain my wife, Frances, to be my sole executrix of this my will and to transact all business as amply and as fully as I myself, if living, could do, without bond or security.

In witness whereof, I hereunto set my hand and seal in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, March the sixteenth.

WILLIAM VAWTER. [Seal.]

(Will No. 2.)

In the name of Almighty God, Amen.

I, William Vawter, of Jennings county, Indiana, do hereby make and ordain this my last will and testament. It is my will and desire that my wife, Frances Vawter, enjoy and possess all and every part of my estate, both personal and real, during her natural life. The whole is hereby placed in her hands to manage and control as fully and as perfectly in every respect as I myself, if living, could do; and that without being under any obligation to give bond or security for the faithful management of the same, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

It is my will and desire that should any of my estate remain undisposed of and unused at the death of my wife that the same be equally divided amongst all my legal heirs, so as to make each and every heir equal, taking into consideration the advances already made to most or all of them, as will appear in my memorandum book. Should my son, John T. Vawter, and his children remain as now with a combination or community of individuals in the west, on the death of my wife, then and in that case I give and bequeath his portion to the Franklin Baptist College in Indiana.

Although I am now in my sixty-seventh year, sick and very weak, yet my mind is as clear and perfect as usual.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 13th day of March, 1849.

In the presence of

WILLIAM VAWTER. [Seal.]

JOHN VAWTER.

RACHEL C. CRAWFORD.

This will is null and void.

WILLIAM VAWTER.

LAST WILL OF WILLIAM VAWTER.

Be it remembered that on the 12th day of October, 1869, in vacation of the Jennings Court of Common Pleas, the last will and testament of William Vawter was duly proven and admitted to probate in the clerk's office of said court, which will and the proof thereof is in the words and figures following, to wit:

"I, William Vawter, now in my sixty-ninth year since the second of April last, and knowing, according to nature, that I must soon go to the spirit world, and being desirous of disposing of my estate which the Lord has blessed me with, make my last will, revoking all others.

"1st. I recommend my spirit to God who gave it and my body to be interred in mother earth in a manner corresponding with my estate.

"2d. I direct that all my just debts be paid as soon as there is money to pay them.

"3d. I bequeath to Maria Burns' children one hundred dollars; the four boys five dollars each; the two oldest girls, fifteen dollars each, and Sarah Jane fifty dollars.

"4th. I will and bequeath to my wife, Frances Vawter, all my real and personal estate during her natural life, and further, I do not design that the one hundred dollars bequeathed to Maria's children shall be paid until after the death of my wife, unless she is disposed to pay it or any part thereof.

"5th. I have given to Elizabeth Stott, Jesse R. Vawter and Polly Feagler their shares heretofore. After the death of my wife I bequeath and will all my real and personal estate after the payment of the above legacies unto John T. Vawter, Williamson D. Vawter, James Vawter, Achilles Vawter, Frances King and Philemon Vawter, to be equally divided.

"6th. I appoint Williamson and James Vawter my executors.

"In testimony whereof, I have set my hand and seal this 24th day of March, A. D., 1852.

WILLIAM VAWTER.

"Signed, sealed and acknowledged in the presence of those who have signed their names as witnesses and by the testator's request and in his presence.

JAMES H. VAWTER.

"ACHILLES VAWTER.

"H. T. VAWTER.

"By request of the testator I certify that this is still his will this June 25, 1859.

W. T. STOTT, JR."

CODICIL TO MY LAST WILL.

This is the closing up of my earthly matters, that is to say, at the death of myself and wife.

I give to my oldest sons, John T. and Williamson D., four hundred dollars in government bonds, two hundred to each. The one hundred dollars set apart in my will for Maria Burns' children, I wish carried out.

The remainder of my estate, after the death of myself and wife and the payment of all debts, is to be equally divided between my three youngest sons, James, Achilles and Philemon, and my daughter, Frances Ann King.

This can be done without going to the expense of proving and recording my will.

WILLIAM VAWTER.

MARIA (VAWTER) BURNS

Maria Vawter, daughter of William and Frances Vawter, was born in Jefferson county, near Madison, Indiana, December 16, 1809. She lived there on the farm until December 16, 1826, when she was married to Maxa M. Burns. They lived in Vernon for a year or two, then her mother-in-law died and they went to Wirt to keep house for her father-in-law's family. Maria (Vawter) Burns was a devoted Christian, a member of the Baptist church from early womanhood, and was respected and loved by both relatives and friends. She died December 7, 1846, at the age of thirty-seven years.

Maxa Moncrief Burns was the son of James Burns, one of the early settlers of Jefferson county, and was the brother of Miles and Taulman Burns. He was born April 27, 1808; died March 17, 1890. James Burns, the father of Maxa, was born in Loudon county, Virginia, September 28, 1786; died December 29, 1875. (More of the Burns family will be found in the chapter on "Customs.")

David Burns, one of the children of Maxa and Maria Burns, gives his remembrance of the breaking up of the family after the death of his mother, as follows:

"My mother died at Wirt, Indiana, where we then lived. Sallie, together with Harry, had been living at grandfather's for about two months. My mother's remains were taken to the old farm for burial. It was my first ride so far as I have any recollection. I think we must have left Mary and Lizzie out there at the time, as I do not remember their being at the old home after the funeral. Mary went to live with Aunt Frank, and Lizzie with Aunt Lizzie. My father, James, Will, and myself returned home. We kept house until sometime during the next summer. Will did the housework; James worked in the sawmill which my father owned, running the engine, young as he was. The next summer we visited at grandfather's again and Aunt Polly asked for me and I was left with her. My father afterwards sold the mill at Wirt and bought another one at Dupont. Will then made his home with Dr. Butler of Dupont, looking after his horses, doing chores and attending school. After about two years my father married and we were all taken home to Dupont, except Sallie, who remained with grandfather and grandmother until nearly the time of their death. My brother James did not live with us at Dupont. I think he must have remained with the old sawmill at Wirt, which was then owned by an uncle of ours. James stuck to sawmills all his life, and never seemed happy when away from one. In 1855 we moved to Sharpsville."

Of the move to Sharpsville, Harrison Burns, another son, said:

"Some friends from Dupont had gone to Sharpsville to live, and my father and I concluded to go and see the country. We rode to Martinsville, walked to Mooresville, then to Plainfield and on to Indianapolis, which had then, in the year 1854, about twelve thousand inhabitants. We went on from there to Sharpsville and then returned to Dupont. When we moved to Sharpsville in the spring of 1855 I rode through on horseback. There wasn't a sign of a road within fifteen miles of Sharpsville. I sometimes went in the woods, which were very swampy, and sometimes on the railroad. All that spring two horses couldn't haul the wagons through the streets because of the mud. Nearly every one in the town had chills and fever. There were two doctors. Both were sick and lay in bed and dosed out quinine to those who were able to come for it."

The children of Maxa and Maria (Vawter) Burns were Jesse V., James, William V., Harrison, Livingston S., David V., Mary F., Elizabeth and Sarah J.

He then went home to Dupont, Indiana in 1849. He and his father built four houses in Dupont in the year 1853, and then went down by boat into Louisiana, where they built a house for a planter, which took them five or six months, as the lumber was all prepared by hand. In 1855 his father moved to Sharpsville, and soon after that Harrison Burns went to Martinsville as a carpenter. The next year he was a cabin-boy on a river boat running from Cincinnati to New Orleans. In 1857 he went into his brother William's law office in Martinsville. He practiced law in Bloomfield, Indiana, for fourteen years. He was elected judge of the Common Pleas Court of Indiana, Ninth District, for two terms, beginning his

She lived with her grandparents until eighteen years of age. When thirteen years old she had brain fever. When fourteen years of age she had rheumatism, not being able to walk a step for six months, and then using crutches for three years. She then had cerebro-spinal meningitis, which resulted in total loss of sight, but in almost a cure of the rheumatism. She entered the Institution for the Blind, taking up her studies where she left off, and graduating from there in three years, teaching reading, arithmetic and geography for one year in one of the grades. After all this time she still held to a cheerful confidence that she would see again. It was some time after the paralysis of the eyelids was overcome and the eyeballs (which were turned backward) had been turned into their natural position by a skillful doctor before she began to see, but gradually the sight was restored.

ELIZABETH (VAWTER) STOTT

Elizabeth Vawter, daughter of William and Frances Vawter, was born September 17, 1811, in Jefferson county, Indiana, near Madison, and while she was yet a young girl united with the Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church. Her father moved to Jennings county, Indiana, when she was about sixteen years of age. She was married to John Stott about four years later. She was of a quiet, unassuming nature, but yet decided in her opinions. One of her children, in talking of her, said: "When mother spoke we always knew she meant what she said and we did what she required. Father was a preacher, and in those days preachers received no remuneration for their services, but gave time and effort freely, making their living on their farms or in other business. The time given to traveling about preaching was just so much time taken away from the work by which the family lived; so the wives of preachers had more to contend with than other women. My mother was often worried in the early years of father's preaching because of the time spent away from the farm, but later grew reconciled and became the most patient person I ever saw. Every one was attracted by her sweet, lovable disposition. Her Christian influence on her own family was most marked. She and father labored and prayed for the conversion of their children, and lived to see them all, except Vawter, who died in infancy, members of the Zoar Baptist Church. Mother was confined to her bed for a year before her death. She died in Franklin, Johnson county, Indiana, November 17, 1893, aged eighty-two years."

John Stott was born March 14, 1811, in Woodford county, Kentucky. His parents moved to Jennings county, Indiana, in 1816. He worked on a farm until he was seventeen or eighteen years old, when he went to Vernon to learn the tanner's trade with his uncle. He was married to Elizabeth Vawter April 7, 1831, and they went to housekeeping in Vernon. In a short time they moved out on a farm near William Vawter's, the father of Elizabeth. Here John Stott divided his time between farming and tanning. He began preaching about 1848. Most of his time was given to local churches, and he did great good in strengthening weak churches. He united with the Vernon Church in 1828. John Stott and his wife lived on the same farm for fifty years. They celebrated their golden wedding there in 1881. Four years afterward they moved to the Hopewell neighborhood near Franklin, Indiana, in order to be near their son. Here John Stott died December 29, 1887, aged seventy-seven years.

JOHN TAYLOR VAWTER

John Taylor Vawter, son of William and Frances Vawter, was born in Jefferson county, Indiana, August 20, 1813, and was married to Pamela Dwyer May 10, 1835. He and his wife and child, Edward, went to Iowa in the general land rush in 1839, when the government opened the land of that territory to the public. The land was then in the hands of rangers—men who pastured their stock upon the lands but who did not own them. These rangers naturally objected to the incoming settlers, and even after these settlers had entered their claims and were living upon them the rangers tried to drive them away by persecution. John T. Vawter was arrested once for arson and four times for perjury upon statements sworn to by the rangers. Although he proved himself innocent every time he spent all he had in defending himself.

About this time there came to Iowa a German preacher, who preached in both the German and English languages and who interested Mr. Vawter more than any one he had ever heard. The minister was one of a German community in Ohio. Later, John T. Vawter went sixty miles to hear another one of these preachers. This second minister told him of a German colony which was being organized in Shelby county, Missouri, and said that Mr. Vawter could become a member if he so desired. Mr. Vawter was very much pleased with the idea and went with his family to Missouri and united with the colony. At that time he had four children. These children learned to speak German long before their father did, and he said they would often come to him and ask questions that he could not make out. Their first education was entirely in German. There were only two American families in the colony. Mr. Vawter lived in the colony for about eighteen years, and says he remembers it as one of the happiest periods of his life.

When the colony was first organized at Bethel, Missouri, the members lived in tents, and there were many more in the town then, in 1845, than there are at the present time. Each family lived in its own house as soon as the houses could be built. Such improvements were made about the place as were deemed necessary by the elders and Mr. Kyle, who was the head. One of the directors came around each morning and said: "You go here, you work there, you plant, you plow," and so on. The women did the lighter kinds of work in the field, the girls and women also working in the glove factory and the woolen mill. The men worked on the farms, in the tannery, the distillery and at herding. There was a superintendent for each department—the farm, the factory, and so on. These superintendents were under the direction of the elders. The people were allowed provisions and clothing according to the number in the family, and the supply was abundant. Whisky was furnished also, but there was no drunkenness in the colony. No money was allowed to the members.

At first the colony was very poor, but it grew prosperous as the years passed, and the people lived better and had more time for amusements. At Elim, a short distance from Bethel, was the residence of Mr. Kyle, the leader. At this place was a great pavilion and concert hall. Here the people had two great festivals a year—the May Festival and the Harvest Festival. At both of these they had an abundance of good things to eat and music and dancing. At Hebrun, one mile northwest of Bethel, was the colony cemetery.

Mr. Kyle, who was a minister and also the head of the colony, was a very remarkable man. He possessed a powerful personality and a wonderful control over the people. He ruled the colony in a manner which seemed to be for the best good of all. The people no more thought of questioning his authority than they would that of their Creator. Even the young people had to ask his consent when they thought of getting married.

John T. Vawter, while a member of the colony, at first lived in the town. He was a herder, and after a while moved out in the country, as it became necessary for him to attend to his herding at a greater distance from the town. He took up a claim of one hundred and sixty acres, and the colony improved it. The first house they built for him was by the side of the creek. While in this house the family constantly had the chills and fever. The colony then built a house for them on the hill, and after living there a while the chills left them. Mr. Vawter's father and mother visited him while in the colony.

Before the colony was disbanded a number of the members went to Oregon, among them Edward Vawter, the son of John T. Vawter. Mr. Kyle, the head of the colony, afterwards went to Oregon to bury his son who had died there, and as the members were not doing well he remained to take charge of the Oregon branch. He retained control of the Missouri branch, but appointed Andrew Giesé as manager. Andrew Giesé was in turn followed by Jacob Miller. Under these changes in leadership the colonists became dissatisfied.

About this time John T. Vawter went for a visit to his relatives in Indiana, and when he returned to Missouri decided to sever his connection with the colony. Although he had nothing when he went into the colony, when he left it he had his farm, which he had pre-empted, his house and barn and the stock upon the farm, and had in the meantime brought up a large family; so that his experience had not been a bad thing for him financially. On this farm were born his other three children by his first wife. Here his first wife died December 16, 1861. Here he was married, second, to Mrs. N. S. Philliper, July 12, 1866, and here his youngest child, Albert, was born. Soon after Mr. Vawter withdrew the colony was disbanded.

John T. Vawter and his wife are now living in Bethel, Missouri. He is ninety-two years old.

He was mustered into the United States service at St. Louis, Missouri, as a private of Captain James M. Collier's Company "G," Eleventh Regiment Cavalry, Missouri Volunteers, Colonel William D. Wood commanding. This regiment took part in the action at Spring Town, from where it marched to Jacksonport and participated in that fight, April 26, 1864. In May the regiment was ordered to Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, and during its stay there took part in the engagements at Ashley's and Jones' Stations, Augusta, Searcy, Dardanelle and Morristown, and marched over ten thousand miles in expeditions, raids and scouts. In November, 1864, the regiment was ordered to Brownsville, Arkansas, and attached to the Second Brigade, Cavalry Division, Seventh Army Corps; in February, 1865, was ordered to Little Rock, Arkansas, remaining there until May; thence to New Orleans, en route for the Rio Grande. On arriving at New Orleans in July the order was countermanded and the regiment ordered to Benton Barracks, Missouri. It was mustered out of service July 27, 1865, at Greenville, Louisiana, thence moved to Benton Barracks, St. Louis, Missouri, and received final pay and discharge August 11, 1865.

William Vawter, in the spring of 1865, was confined in the hospital at Little Rock, Arkansas, owing to illness, and when he returned to St. Louis found that his company had been disbanded. He received an honorable discharge at St. Louis on the 11th of August, 1865, by reason of the close of war. He was married April 5, 1866, at Shelbyville, Missouri, to Matilda F. McKinnon Christman, who was born November 14, 1843, in St. Louis county, Missouri. She was married first to William Christman, who was one of the Union soldiers massacred by the Quantrell band of outlaws in the battle of Centralia, Missouri.

William Vawter's eyes were injured during the war and he was mustered out almost blind. Several years after the war he engaged in the mercantile business in Ivanhoe, Missouri; sold out his business there in 1885, and with his family moved to Meade county, Kansas, where he took a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres of land, but the hot winds and grasshoppers in the summer and the blizzards in the winter soon drove the family away. They moved to Polk county, Missouri, where William bought a farm. Selling this farm, he moved to Bullion, Adair county, Missouri. WILLIAMSON DUNN VAWTER

Williamson Dunn Vawter, son of William and Frances Vawter, was born August 28, 1815, at Mt. Glad, near Madison, Indiana. His father moved to Jennings county, Indiana, when he was about twelve years of age. He attended the country schools, his first text books being a spelling book and the New Testament, then the American First Class Book. Among his teachers was Mrs. Lard, a noted teacher in the early days of Indiana. Williamson's father proposed to make a farmer of his son, but the boy had no liking for that vocation and left his father's home soon after reaching the age of twelve years. He went to Kentucky to a cousin by the name of Stapp, with whom he stayed for a time. Afterwards he went to live with his uncle, Colonel John Vawter, for whom he had a great affection. John Vawter wanted to make a business man of Williamson. The first work of the boy was driving an ox-team between Vernon and Madison, carrying merchandise for his uncle's store, which was located in Vernon and was the great emporium for a vast region of country. This work, which was full of adventure and danger, the roads being bad and the woods affording lurking places for occasional savages, just suited the daring spirit of the boy. Later he became a clerk in the mercantile house of his uncle, and then a partner in the same store with his cousin, Smith Vawter. Williamson and Smith Vawter carried on business together in the same brick building at the old Vawter corner in Vernon for forty years. Williamson Vawter was the junior partner. He was also postmaster of Vernon for a number of years, a leader in temperance work and treasurer and custodian of the Bible depository of the Jennings county branch of the American Bible Society from its organization until he moved to California. He did not despise the day of small things, but was ever ready to assist in any measure for the good of the community. He took a lively interest in municipal politics; was a whig during the life of that party and a member of the republican party from its birth; was an abolitionist in principle; voted for General William Henry Harrison for president of the United States and also voted for Benjamin Harrison in 1888.

Williamson D. Vawter and family went from Vernon, Indiana, to Los Angeles county, California, in 1875, W. D. Vawter being one of the original members of the "Indiana Colony." This colony bought land where Pasadena now stands. The climate of Santa Monica, however, seemed to offer superior attractions, and there Williamson Vawter and sons bought property and engaged in business, partaking actively in every measure for the good of the town. W. D. Vawter was one of the founders of the first church organized and built in Santa Monica—the Presbyterian Church. The first street railway in Santa Monica was built, owned and operated by Williamson Vawter and his two sons, W. S. and E. J. Vawter. The First National Bank of Santa Monica was organized by himself and sons, and the largest brick block there was built by same. W. D. Vawter was president of the bank at one time, and at the time of his death was still engaged in that business.

Williamson D. Vawter was married July 15, 1834, to Mary Charlotte Tilghman Crowder, who was born May 12, 1817, and died September 22, 1851, and was buried in the Vernon cemetery. The children of Williamson D. and Mary Charlotte Tilghman (Crowder) Vawter were Mary Ellen, May, Jane Cravens, Aramantha Charlotte, William Smith and Edwin James.

Williamson D. Vawter was married, second, November 10, 1852, to Charlotte Augusta Knowlton, who was born in Shrewsbury, Massachusetts, July 31, 1819, and died in Santa Monica, California, December 27, 1893. Children of Williamson and Charlotte (Knowlton) Vawter were Emma Knowlton and Charles Knowlton.

Williamson D. Vawter died in Santa Monica, California, July 10, 1894.

Children:

(1) Mary Ellen Vawter, daughter of Williamson D. and Mary (Crowder) Vawter, was born in Vernon, Indiana, October 23, 1836. At the age of eighteen she began teaching, but after teaching two years at May Hill and Deer Creek her eyesight failed and she was compelled to remain a year in a dark room. When twenty-three years of age she was married to Ward Leavitt, of Chautauqua, New York. Children: Charles Dunn, born February 16, 1862; died October 2, 1862; Florence May, born August 3, 1865.

In the spring of 1875 Mr. and Mrs. Leavitt and daughter went to Los Angeles county, California, with the family of E. J. Vawter. They were stockholders in the Indiana Colony. After a few months' sojourn at Pasadena and Los Angeles, they came to Santa Monica. In 1880 they went back to Pasadena, and after seven years of orange ranch life there they returned to Santa Monica, where Mr. Leavitt died, October 23, 1896.

(2) May Vawter, daughter of Williamson and Mary (Crowder) Vawter, was born in Vernon, Jennings county, Indiana, March 4, 1838. She was educated in the Vernon schools. She stood well in her classes and had a fair musical education; taught school in Lafayette, Indiana, with her uncle, A. J. Vawter, who was at that time superintendent of the Lafayette schools; traveled through the southern and eastern states and Canada and came to the Pacific coast with her father's family in 1875. She was married in the spring of 1876 by Rev. Dr. Condit, to Switzer Soutter Harwood, M. D., at her father's home in Santa Monica, California. Mr. and Mrs. Harwood lived in San Pablo, California, then in San Francisco, going afterwards to Yreka, Siskiyou county, the extreme northern portion of California. They then went to Sydney, Australia, to live, May V. Harwood making the voyage to and from there several times. She died in Sydney, Australia, March 1, 1884. May (Vawter) Harwood was self-reliant, active, daring and adventurous from her childhood. She united with the Vernon Presbyterian Church and was one of the charter members of the First Presbyterian Church of Santa Monica, California.

Dr. Switzer Soutter Harwood was born in London, England. He went with his parents to Sydney, Australia, where he remained for a short time, returning to England to complete his education. He came to San Francisco in 1875, and in that same year to southern California. In Santa Monica he met and married May Vawter. There were no children.

(3) Jane Cravens Vawter, daughter of Williamson D. and Mary (Crowder) Vawter, was born in Vernon, Indiana, April 17, 1840. The name Cravens was given in honor of a political friend of her father. She was interested in political and national questions from childhood and became a stanch abolitionist at ten years of age. She received her education, for the most part, in the private and public schools of Vernon, and afterwards continued her studies under the direction of the family physician, Dr. J. C. Burt, following the course of study laid out in the catalogue of Hanover College. She then took special courses of reading for several years. At twenty years of age she taught for several months in the public schools of Indianapolis, and again at twenty-two. She was a teacher of the higher English and algebra, besides other branches. She united with the Vernon Presbyterian Church April 17, 1864; was the projector and one of the founders of the first Sunday-school in Santa Monica, California. The school was organized and carried on for some weeks in the W. D. Vawter homestead. Jennie Vawter was a charter member of the First Presbyterian Church of Santa Monica; served for a time as Sunday-school superintendent, and later took charge of a class of boys and girls, thirty in number, taking them from ten years of age until they were men and women. She was one of two solicitors who collected funds for the erection of the beautiful building of the Presbyterian Church now in use in Santa Monica, California, a building made possible by the generosity and sympathy of her father and mother, with their family. She and her sister Emma live together in the old homestead in Santa Monica.

(4) Aramantha Charlotte Vawter, daughter of Williamson D. and Mary (Crowder) Vawter, was born in Vernon, Indiana, September 25, 1841. She was educated in the Jennings Academy in Vernon and in the Female College at Oxford, Ohio. She commenced to teach school when not quite seventeen years old in Scipio, Indiana, afterward taking a school in the country at a place called the "Forks of Graham." After this she resumed her studies, and later taught for a time in Lafayette, Columbus and Vernon, Indiana. She was married October 16, 1866, at her father's home in Vernon, to Septimius Vater of Lafayette, Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Vater are members of the oldest literary society in Lafayette (the Parlor Club), and are the members of the longest standing in it. Mrs. Vater is also a member of the Monday Club—a woman's organization. She is a Presbyterian in religious belief and was for many years president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the church and also held the office of president of the Missionary Society of the Crawfordsville Presbytery for several years. and worked in the office of the Times for more than a year. In October, 1864, he went to Lafayette, Indiana, and became business manager of the Courier. In January, 1869, Mr. Vater bought the Lafayette Journal in partnership with Benjamin B. Barron, who died about a year and a half afterward. Mr. Vater then conducted the paper alone until 1882, when he sold it and spent a year or more in California with his family. In March, 1885, Mr. Vater purchased the Evening Call. This paper he published for over ten years, when he sold out. In 1898 he bought stock and went into Perrin's National Bank as an officer. Here William Vawter took part in the affairs of the community. When the public school was started he became one of the trustees, serving three years. When the village became a city he was elected a trustee and served in that capacity for four years. Vawter, in general merchandise, at the old "Vawter Corner" in Vernon. The firm name was W. D. and E. J. Vawter. On the removal of the W. D. Vawter family to California in 1875 the partnership between father and son continued. E. J.

Vawter was a stockholder and pioneer in the "Indiana Colony," which located where Pasadena, California, is now. The Vawter families afterwards settled in Santa Monica, Los Angeles county, California, and, the business expanding by the addition of lumber yards, barley and planing mills, W. S. Vawter also became a partner.

E. J. Vawter then organized a company to carry on real estate transactions, banking, railroading, etc. He, with his father and brother, organized the First National Bank of Santa Monica in 1888, and he was elected cashier. During this time they incorporated, built and operated the first street railway in Santa Monica, afterwards selling their road to the Los Angeles and Pacific Electric Railway Company. The First National Bank of Santa Monica was sold in 1893 to Senator Jones of Nevada, and was soon after disorganized, a state institution taking its place.

Together with his father and brother E. J. Vawter then organized a commercial company and also a state bank, called "The Commercial Bank of Santa Monica," W. S. Vawter being elected president. W. D. Vawter dying in the summer of 1894, W. S. Vawter withdrew from the company, and E. J. Vawter succeeded to the presidency of the bank and was the controller of the commercial company's affairs. Having brought the interests of the Vawter families to a condition where he could close out the banking business without too great a sacrifice, he took that step in 1899. He remains the president and manager of the commercial company, which represents the properties left himself and four sisters by the will of their father. He is now president of the First National Bank of Ocean Park, California.

E. J. Vawter is also engaged in floriculture, making a specialty of the cultivation of the carnation and the violet for the market. His carnation field is said to be the largest flower garden in the world. From twelve to twenty thousand blooms are cut from it daily. The Vawter carnation fields are considered one of the wonders of California, and are visited by people from all parts of the world.

In politics E. J. Vawter is a republican. He cast his first presidential vote for Grant in 1872; was a member of the town council of Vernon, Indiana, for two years; was twice a delegate to state, once to congressional, and many times to county conventions while in Indiana. In California he was three times state delegate and often was delegate to county conventions; was for six years a member of the city council of Santa Monica, and for six years a member of the school board. He united with the Presbyterian Church of Santa Monica, California, March 8, 1896.

Edwin J. Vawter was married at Vernon, Indiana, May 25, 1870, to Laura Dixon by Rev. Washington Malick. Laura (Dixon) Vawter, the daughter of Samuel M. and Belinda (Foster) Dixon, of Vernon, was born May 20, 1851; died March 1, 1886. There was one child, Edwin J. Vawter, Jr.

Edwin J. Vawter was married, second, September 18, 1888, to Mrs. Isabelle L. Nelson, daughter of William and Rose (Ward) Cummings, who was born November 7, 1857. a. Edwin James Vawter, Jr., son of Edwin J. and Laura (Dixon) Vawter, was born in Vernon, Jennings county, Indiana, June 10, 1871. He was taken by his father and mother to California in 1875. After the death of his mother in 1886 he went to his grandfather's to live. At sixteen years of age he entered Purdue University at Lafayette, Indiana, where he remained one year. In 1888 he entered the University of California at Berkeley. He was taken with an attack of typhoid fever during the Christmas holidays and was unable to return to school that year. In 1889 he accepted a clerkship in the First National Bank of Santa Monica, California. After this bank was sold to Senator Jones he remained with the new bank which was soon organized until it was in complete running order; was paying teller during the panic of 1893. On the organization of the Commercial Bank of Santa Monica in 1894 he accepted a place in that bank, and within a year was advanced to the position of cashier. Politically he is a republican. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and organized a company of the "Uniform Rank" at Santa Monica, which he served as captain for two years, resigning to accept a position as adjutant of First Battalion, Third Regiment; is also a Mason. He united with the Presbyterian Church in boyhood and has served as a trustee for several years. In 1898 he went on a voyage to Honolulu, where he remained four months. On his return, he became cashier in the Main Street Savings Bank of Los Angeles, California, and now is cashier in the United States National Bank of Los Angeles.

JESSE R. VAWTER

Jesse R. Vawter, son of William and Frances Vawter, was born July 11, 1817, in Jefferson county, near Madison, Indiana. He gives the following account of his life in a record book in which he kept very carefully the dates of births, marriages and deaths in the families of his children:

"I was married May 4, 1837, to Sarah Parks, who was born August 31, 1822. We first went to housekeeping on my father-in-law's place on Gray's Branch, Jennings county, Indiana, where we lived about three years. Then I built a double cabin on my own land on Fish creek, where I lived nearly two years, and then moved on father's place. After I sold my land on Fish creek father gave me five acres of land and I bought forty acres of him at another place, where I lived for five years. I then traded with father and got a small farm on the creek one mile below his home. I stayed there sixteen years, when I lost my health, traded my farm for town property, and moved to North Vernon in the spring of 1867. I lived there one year and then gave my town property to my son, William A. Vawter, for the support of myself and wife. This property he put into a farm in Campbell township, Jennings county, Indiana. In the spring of 1868 I moved with him on the farm and lived in the same house with him until I built a small hewed log house on the same farm, where I now live, this 23d day of November, 1875."

William A. He was never very strong, therefore he was not expected to do much manual labor. He attended the best schools there were at that time until he met with an accident which deprived him of school privileges. After he had regained his health he went to Morgantown, Indiana, and clerked in a store for his uncle, John Vawter, for two or three years. From there he went to Lafayette and was a clerk in a dry goods store for several years. Afterwards he went into business for himself in Oxford, Indiana, accumulating a small fortune in merchandise and land speculation. He was married at Oxford to Minerva L. FRANCES (VAWTER) KING

Frances Vawter, daughter of William and Frances Vawter, was born June 7, 1821; married May 14, 1840, to George King, who was born May 10, 1814, and died September 3, 1858.

Something of the life of Frances (Vawter) King is best given in a copy of a letter written by her to her niece:

"My life has been a very uneventful one. I was born in Jefferson county, Indiana, near Madison. Father moved his family to Jennings county in October, 1827, and settled on the banks of the Muscatatack, three miles north of the town of Vernon. My childhood and young womanhood were spent on the farm. I was married to George King in 1840, and in 1841 we settled on the hill in sight of my old home. Here the sweetest and saddest scenes of my life have been passed. Here my children were born, and from here two of them have gone to a better land. The other three are living earnest, faithful Christian lives. My husband was born in Ohio. He came to Jennings county when quite young to build a mill. He was a carpenter as well as a farmer. He passed into the better land in 1858, and I have had a long and lonely road to travel ever since, and yet I am not alone. My children are kind, and I have a host of friends, but I miss the companionship of a dear husband, and long to meet the dear ones on the other shore.

"I joined the Baptist Church in my eighteenth year. After studying the Bible and the principles of the Christian Church I became convinced that that teaching was according to what Christ and the Apostles taught, and changed my membership to that church, and I hope through Christ to pass from that into the everlasting Kingdom."

For six years before the death of Anna Vawter, Frances Vawter, her granddaughter, cared for her, and after the marriage of Frances she took care of her father and mother for about six years before their death. When her sister Maria died she cared for one of her children some time, and when the wife of her brother Achilles died she took his baby and kept her for a year. ACHILLES J. VAWTER

Achilles J. Vawter, son of William and Frances Vawter, was born near Madison Indiana, September 12, 1823. When he was about six years of age his father moved to Jennings county, Indiana, and settled on the north fork of the Muscatatack, three and a half miles from Vernon, Indiana. After coming there the children were deprived to a great extent of the benefit of schools, and the parents of Achilles taught him to read at home. When the schools were established they were limited to three or four months in the winter. Achilles Vawter had in some way become possessed of a desire for a better education, and in September of the year 1844 he left home with ten dollars in his pocket to attend school at Franklin College, which was then called "The Indiana Baptist Manual Labor Institute." The cars were running only as far as Columbus, and from there he went on foot to Franklin. He boarded with Elder J. Reece (who was at that time a student in the college) for seventy-five cents a week and spent all the time he could spare from his studies in chopping wood at twenty-five cents a cord for Professor Brand. By this means he was enabled to continue in school for one session. He then returned home and spent his vacation in labor, earning enough, together with $17.00 given him by his father, to carry him through another session, which made one year of study. He then had to leave school for a while in order to raise enough means to continue. He spent two and a half months as a clerk in the store of his uncle in Morgantown, Indiana, after which he taught one quarter's school in the same place. He then returned to Franklin and spent one session, then taught another quarter's school and then went back to Franklin, and so on.

President Chandler and wife became warm friends of Achilles Vawter, and through the recommendation of the president he was appointed in the summer of 1849 principal of the preparatory department of the college. He held this position for one year, then entered school again. In 1850 he went to Shelbyville to take charge of the schools there. He was married July 25, 1850, to Maria Dunham, who was born April 20, 1827. They had one child, Ida, who was born February 4, 1856; died October 9, 1856. Maria Dunham Vawter died February 6, 1856.

In 1855 Achilles Vawter was traveling for a School Book Company, and in that business he touched Lafayette and came in contact with the trustees of the public schools. He found them in need of a superintendent, and he was engaged. Both he and his brother Philemon went to Lafayette in 1855, and both remained in connection with the schools until 1858. It was in Lafayette that Achilles Vawter was married, November 16, 1856, to Elizabeth (Richardson) Baker, who had been before married to William Baker, and who had two sons, Edgar and Albert Baker, at the time of her second marriage.

In 1858 Achilles Vawter engaged to take charge of an academy to be opened three miles south of Ladoga, Montgomery county, Indiana. Just before the beginning of the school the building burned. The next year he was back in Lafayette in charge of a girls' school, which did not run more than two years. He was then chosen superintendent of the public schools again, which position he held until he was elected county surveyor in 1862. He was re-elected in 1864. Elizabeth, his wife, died October 14, 1864, and in the spring of 1865 he resigned the office of county surveyor.

In 1866 Achilles Vawter went to Indianapolis and was there married, on May 1, to Charlotte S. Hobart. He opened a law office in partnership with a nephew of his who was a lawyer. This business failed, and in 1867 Achilles Vawter and his wife moved to Ladoga, Indiana, and took charge of the Baptist Seminary. He was at the head of that school for five years. In 1873 he returned to Indianapolis, where he engaged for a time in teaching; was on the editorial staff of the Indiana Farmer for a while, and was assistant secretary of the board of agriculture for several years. In 1877, his health failing, he went to Kentucky. He and his wife had charge of an academy at Pleasant Grove, near Springfield, Kentucky, for three years. Then he taught one year in the village of Texas and two years in Springfield, where he was in charge of the Covington Institute. At this place he was stricken while in the school room with paralysis. After this he was never able for further duty. When he had recovered sufficiently he returned to Indianapolis, where he spent the most of his time until his death, which occurred January 13, 1886.

Achilles Vawter united with the Baptist Church in 1842, and at one time expected to be a minister, as his father and grandfather had been before him, but he gave this up and devoted his life principally to teaching.

Elijah Sherrill, a well-known man in Indiana, was a pupil of Achilles Vawter, and in writing of him said: "The years during which Professor Vawter was at the head of the Baptist Seminary in Ladoga, Indiana, where I was a pupil, were fraught with unceasing care and toil, with meagre compensation, but the result of the work done can never be estimated. Much of what the writer is to-day he owes to this man. Very many others can say the same. The old days at Ladoga can never be forgotten by many dear boys and girls (men and women now) who received their first training and inspiration from him. To us all he was far more than a teacher. He was father, friend and benefactor. He was an educator of ability. He was instrumental in organizing the Indiana State Teachers' Association, and his influence was felt in more ways than one in educational work."

Achilles Vawter was a student all his life. He treasured his books as he did his friends, and they were to him constant companions. He was possessed of knowledge on a great variety of subjects, and because of his wide reading he seemed as familiar with other countries and their histories as though he had traveled extensively. He was a quiet, unassuming man, a man who, with his love of study and research, could have accomplished far more in the world if he had not been ground down by force of circumstances.

Elizabeth Baker Vawter was born August 11, 1829, in New Carlisle, Clark county, Ohio. Her maiden name was Elizabeth A. Richardson (or Richeson, as it was called by some of the family). She was the daughter of Andrew and Lavina (Corey)

Richardson and had two sisters and one brother. The sisters were Julia Richardson Larkin, who lived in Arlington, Illinois, and Elenor Richardson Armstrong, who lived in Lafayette, Indiana. Her brother Daniel lived in Rhodes, Iowa. Her father and mother died in Ohio of cholera. Elizabeth Richardson was living with her sister, Mrs. Armstrong, in Lafayette, Indiana, when she was married to William Baker, a painter and chair-maker. Mr. Baker died, and Elizabeth Baker was married, second, to Achilles J. Vawter. She died in Lafayette, Indiana, October 14, 1864.

Charlotte (Hobart) Vawter, the third wife of Achilles Vawter, was born in Indianapolis, Indiana, October 26, 1825. She was the daughter of John Hobart and Naomi (Thompson) Hobart. Charlotte Hobart was related to Abraham Lincoln. During the Civil War a discussion was started and direct charges made that Thomas Lincoln, the father of Abraham Lincoln, and Nancy Hanks were never legally married, and this report was successfully proved false by Charlotte Vawter, and her labors in this matter have been fully appreciated by such modern students of Lincoln's life as Ida M. Tarbell and Carolyn Hanks Hitchcock.

Charlotte Vawter was a teacher for many years before her marriage with Achilles Vawter, and after her marriage she assisted her husband in the work of the schools wherever he was engaged. She now lives on the old place where she was born seventy-nine years ago, near Indianapolis, Indiana.

The children of Achilles and Elizabeth (Richardson) Vawter were William Arthur, Frank May and Grace.

(1) William A. Vawter, son of Achilles and Elizabeth (Richardson) Vawter, was born in Lafayette, Indiana, May 22, 1858. He left school at fourteen years of age and became an apprentice in the composing-room of the printing house of Wright, Baker & Co., of Indianapolis, the Baker of the company being a half-brother of William Vawter. In 1880 and 1881 he was the foreman of the composing-room. He was married September 24, 1881, to Alice R. Hadley. Late in 1881 he went into the general merchandising business, first at Plainfield, Indiana, and afterwards at Danville, Indiana. At the end of five years he sold out his business, and, joining with his half-brothers, Edgar and Albert Baker, and his brother, Frank Vawter, embarked in the general printing business in Chicago, Illinois, under the firm name of Baker & Vawter Co. In 1888 the company was reorganized and incorporated under the name of Baker-Vawter Co., and the character of the business changed from general printing to the devising, manufacturing and introducing of improved business systems. William Vawter withdrew from the Baker-Vawter Company in about 1890 and organized a company called the Hadley-Vawter Company. The old Baker-Vawter Company then took the name of the Baker Office Supply Company. The Hadley-Vawter Company proved a success, but after the death of Albert Baker in 1892, it was consolidated with the Baker Office Supply Company taking the old firm name of the Baker-Vawter Company. From a small beginning in 1888 the business has grown to be the largest company of the kind in the world. From one small manufacturing plant and one salesman in 1888 the company now has four large manufacturing plants in different sections of the country and a corps of about one hundred salesmen and professional accountants.

William Vawter originated and patented, and his company introduced, the now generally used loose-leaf ledgers. The Baker-Vawter Company has been the cause of a wonderful change in the business world through the introduction of improved methods of accounting and handling business along loose-leaf lines. The general offices of the company are in the Tribune Building, Chicago. The eastern offices are at 350 Broadway, New York City. Of the Baker brothers who were in the company, Albert died in 1892, and Edgar sold his interest in 1895. William Vawter is the president and general manager of the company and its largest stockholder. Lives in Evanston, Illinois.

When he was seventeen years old he spent a year in study in Kentucky at Pleasant Grove, where his father was at that time teaching school. He then returned to Indiana and again worked for the Baker-Randolph Company (as it was then), the Baker of the company being his half-brother. Frank Vawter afterwards spent three years working on a paper in Kokomo, Indiana, and then returned to Indianapolis. He went to Chicago in 1886 and became a member of the Baker & Vawter Co., which was organized at that time. There were four members of the company, the other three being Edgar and Albert Baker, his half-brothers, and his brother, William Vawter. Frank Vawter remained in Chicago for about two years, then sold out his interest and returned to Indianapolis, where he remained until January, 1889. He was married October 10, 1888, to Clara Smith Miller. He was engaged in the printing business in Kokomo, Indiana, for a short time in the year 1889, moved to Chicago and was employed one year by the Baker & Vawter Company; was engaged in the newspaper business at Big Rapids, Michigan, for about one year, returning to Chicago July, 1892, and entering the employ of the Hadley-Vawter Company, which was afterwards consolidated with the Baker Office Supply Company as the Baker-Vawter Co. He has remained with the Baker-Vawter Company ever since, acting, at the present time, in the capacity of secretary of the company and general superintendent of its various manufacturing plants. He lived in Kokomo from 1897 to 1902, in Morgan Park, a suburb of Chicago until 1905, and now resides in Benton Harbor, Michigan, where the company has its largest factory.

PHILEMON C. VAWTER

Philemon Vawter, youngest child of William and Frances Vawter, was born in Jennings county, Indiana, November 7, 1830.

A short sketch of his life, as given in a letter, is here reproduced:

"I was born in Jennings county, Indiana, November 7, 1830, and lived there for the first twenty-five years of my life. My first schooling was in the primitive log houses of the times, located in the woods at some point to best accommodate the sparsely settled district. The first of these which I attended was lighted by horizontally long windows or openings, closed part of the time with greased paper. The heating apparatus was a broad back wall built of stone with a smoke stack through the roof built of sticks and mud. The fuel was such as could be gathered from the surrounding timber—logs ten to fifteen feet long piled against the back wall with limbs and chunks. These school facilities not being considered quite sufficient, when I was between seventeen and twenty-five years of age I attended school for four or five years at Franklin College. While at Franklin I worked at anything I could get to do—cleaned stables, milked cows, worked on the road, chopped and sawed wood, acted as janitor at church, was morning bellringer to awaken the students in college, dressed poorly and boarded myself a good share of the time, living on mush and molasses with a little butter and bread. Later on, Professor Hougham took a friendly interest in me, gave me lessons in land surveying and made me his deputy, so that the last two years of my college life I did not have to follow the vocations specified above.

"I came to Lafayette and was engaged in the public schools here for a few years. Then I went back to the home farm for two or three years. While there I was married, November 25, 1858, to Sylvia Hunter. After that I spent a year teaching at Sardinia, Decatur county, Indiana, then a year in a store at Scipio, Jennings county, Indiana, where my health failed and I had to give up business for awhile and get out of doors. This brought me back to Lafayette in the autumn of 1862, and in the spring of 1863 we located here, and have lived here continuously ever since. Of these years I have been connected with the county surveyor's office about twenty-five—eighteen as surveyor and seven as deputy surveyor. For five years I was city engineer of Lafayette, and now am town engineer of West Lafayette. I think within those years I have surveyed more lands and lots, laid out more highways and free gravel roads, run more tile drains and ditch lines, than any man living or who has lived in this county."

Sylvia (Hunter) Vawter was born in Jennings county, Indiana, May 1, 1839. She was the daughter of Joseph and Rhoda A. (Conger) Hunter.

Philemon Vawter and wife have been members of the Baptist Church in West Lafayette for many years, and are now connected with the Lafayette Church. They have two children, Everett and William, and have reared a child, Belle Godman.

(1) Everett Bates Vawter, son of Philemon and Sylvia (Hunter) Vawter, was born at the home of his grandfather in Jennings county, Indiana, August 23, 1859. With his parents he moved to Lafayette, Indiana, May 1, 1863. He was educated in the common schools, attending the same during the winter until eighteen years of age. He assisted his father in the practice of surveying and civil engineering when not otherwise engaged. During the summers of 1874, 5, 6 and 7 he worked on a farm, and farmed on his own account during the summer of 1879. In the fall of 1879 he entered the employ of Murphy & Comstock, wholesale boot and shoe manufacturers, where he remained until the summer of 1882, then joined his father in his engineering work. During the greater part of 1882 and 1884 he was engaged in the building of county gravel roads as contractor. In the fall of 1884 he was elected surveyor of Tippecanoe county on the republican ticket, holding the office for three successive terms of two years each, having charge of large drainage systems and the building of the Main Street bridge, Lafayette, Indiana, during the last term. In the spring of 1891 he assisted in the organization of the Lafayette Bridge Company, being actively engaged with said company in the manufacture and sale of railway and highway bridges until the plant and good will of the concern were sold and merged into the American Bridge Company, May 1, 1900.

Everett Vawter was married May 3, 1893, to Helen Read, of West Lafayette, Indiana. During the years 1893 to 1900 he held the position of secretary and treasurer of the bridge company. Has been active in the management of the West Lafayette Water Company since its organization in 1894. In the fall of 1900 he went to Denver, Colorado, to join his wife, who had gone there for her health. From 1900 until the fall of 1903 he lived in Denver and traveled through South Dakota, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and old Mexico as sales agent for the American Bridge Company. In the fall of 1903 he, with his family, returned to Lafayette. There he joined his old business associates in the management of the Lafayette Engineering Company, engaged in the building of concrete and steel structures, and at the present time he is serving the company as president.

JAMES VAWTER

James Vawter, the son of Jesse and Elizabeth Vawter, was born April 2, 1783, near the Holston river in North Carolina, now East Tennessee. He was the twin brother of William. In 1806 the family came to the territory of Indiana and settled at Fairmount, clearing the farm where Mrs. J. S. Weyer afterwards resided, near the tanyard, and which Jesse Vawter called Mt. Glad. James Vawter afterwards settled at Mount Pleasant, now North Madison, and then at his farm at Pressburg, one mile out from North Madison. In 1816 he was married to his cousin, Sarah B., the daughter of Judge Watts. Sarah Watts was born October 26, 1796.

James Vawter was not an active politician, but always voted, and was a zealous supporter of the laws of the land. He was candid and frank in his expression of his conviction of right and wrong, faithful and earnest as a Christian and prompt and liberal as a church member. He was a warm advocate of Franklin College and a liberal contributor to its funds. He died January 12, 1872, in his ninety-first year, surviving his twin brother five years. Sarah (Watts) Vawter died at the residence of her son Milton in the eighty-third year of her age.

James Vawter had his eccentricities, as had all of the older Vawters, and as have many of their descendants to-day. It is told of him that whenever he brought anything home and didn't know where to put it that he built a shed for it—that he finally had about five acres on his place covered with sheds. James Vawter lived on the top of the hill. William Rice had a mill a short distance above and off the road which ran at the foot of the hill. He wanted the road to come by his mill and not by William Stribling's, so he built a fence across the road to force people to go around by his mill. At that time Pressburg consisted of only a few houses and, in its best days, perhaps a mill or two. The houses were not very close together and were all farm houses.

James Vawter's house was right in Pressburg, and yet was in the country.

William Brazelton, a poet of Jefferson county, wrote these verses :

"Of all the spots here in the world
For honor and renown
I own in Pressburg is unfurled
The beauty of a town.

"If much you travel through that town
Take care your feet and head
Or you will find you'll be crushed down
Beneath some tottering shed.

"Sheds, yes, propped and potted up,
Without the form of walls,
Tottering, reeling to and fro,
Hit one prop and fifty falls.

"The king of sheds lives on a hill
As happy as a toad,
The king of trouble owns a mill,
And stops the public road."

It is also told of James Vawter that he could not resist the temptation to hang a gate wherever he saw two trees located conveniently for the purpose, and that one would often see gates out in a field with no fence near. The truth of this can not be vouched for.

One thing is certain, however, and that is, that "Uncle Jimmy," as he was called, had a den. It was something after the style of the dens men affect these days, only not so luxurious. It was a very small room, built on to one end of the porch. Whenever "Uncle Jimmy" couldn't be found he was nearly sure to be in that den. The room is left just as it was when it was the comfort of "Uncle Jimmy." In it is a small bed or cot of some kind. Around two sides are shelves with jars or bottles containing many different kinds of seeds. Across one end is a row of nails. On the nails are hung strips of wood which were cut just the right size to hold a column of newspaper clippings. In the end of each piece of wood was a hole so the strip might hang on one of the nails. This was the way "Uncle Jimmy" kept his scrap book, and to his den he often came to be quiet and read when the house was full of company.

"Uncle Jimmy" wore a white fur plug hat summer and winter, so one of his nephews said, and he presented a striking appearance in that hat and his great long coat.

This anecdote is also told of James Vawter: There was a woman in the church who was very aggressive. She got up in meeting and, after talking a long time, urged every one to get up and do likewise. When she sat down "Uncle Jimmy" got up and said: "Some need urgin' for'ard and some need holdin' back." Then he sat down without another word.

"Uncle Jimmy" once brought home a wagon-load of brick to be used for some building purpose. He went into town again, and when he returned the second time he found the bricks all tumbled down and half of them broken in pieces. "Boys," said he, "what does this mean?" His grandchildren said: "Why, grandpa, you see it was this way. We were playing war and we put a lot of bricks on one side for Union soldiers and a lot of bricks on the other side for Rebels, and the Union men whipped the Rebels all to pieces, and that is how the bricks got broken." "All right, boys," said "Uncle Jimmy," "if the Rebels got whipped that is all right."

MILTON S. VAWTER

Milton S. Vawter, the son of James and Sarah (Watts) Vawter, was born February 17, 1829, near North Madison, Indiana. An account of the early part of his life is best given in his own words. He says:

"I worked on a farm until I was sixteen years old, then at plastering until my twenty-first year. I then clerked in a store in Bartholomew county, Indiana. At the end of a year I took full charge of the stock and continued the business at Taylorville for one-half the net profit. The country was new, and chills and fever so prevalent that in the fall of 1850 I sold out and returned to Jefferson county, where I was engaged on the plank road which was being built by my brother John. In the spring of 1851 I located at Elizabethtown and engaged in the mercantile business, and in 1852 also attended to the railroad station in connection with my business. In February, 1855, I sold out to G. W. Branhams and went south and engaged with my brother, John W. Vawter, in building plank roads in Louisiana. In the fall of 1856 I was engaged by the Madison and Indianapolis Railroad Company to attend to the business at Amity, which I did in connection with a stock of dry goods and groceries. In the fall of 1858 I went to Martinsville and continued there until spring, receiving and shipping grain until the old road was abandoned; then I engaged to superintend a merchant mill until the fall of 1859. In the spring of 1860 I opened a dry goods and notion store at Madison, Indiana. When the war came on I offered my services in Captain James Bachman's company and was refused. From the years 1855 to 1859 I spent three months of each year away from my other business in buying hogs for Madison pork houses. In the year 1863 I began to work on the river, filling various positions from watchman to captain, having an interest in the boats on which I was employed. I sometimes filled the place of watchman and clerk at the same time while running up the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers. At the close of the war, in 1865, I was on the steamer "David White" in the Louisville and New Orleans trade. In 1867 I left the river to look after my affairs on land, and have ever since been engaged in merchandising and farming. I am living on the land which my father entered in 1825 and which I purchased of my brother in 1867."

Milton Vawter is now seventy-five years of age and is living in the house where he was born. The house is still in very good condition. Besides the old home place, there are a number of small dwellings on the farm which are rented. In a little shed near his home Milton Vawter has a small store, with groceries and notions. Here flour, bacon, sugar and the small necessities which may be needed by the farm people are kept, and the tenants are supplied with what they wish, paying a little at a time as they choose. Mr. Vawter is not confined at home at all by this little store. He is always ready to take friends or relatives around to see the country or other relatives. The store is more in the order of a supply house, and people probably only come in the evenings or mornings.

Milton Vawter is known, too, far and near for his interest in and knowledge of the family. He has furnished many people with copies of old times records, and has been a very great help in the collecting of material for this history.

Milton Vawter was married to Aureana L. Vawter, the daughter of Pascal Vawter, December 28, 1865. Aureana L. Vawter was born January 1, 1843, in Jefferson county, Indiana. Her parents moved to Roman county, Kentucky, in 1856 and to Adair county, Ohio, in 1863.

The children of Milton and Aureana Vawter were Frank C., Jennie and Bert Watts.

(1) Frank C., son of Milton and Aureana Vawter, was born September 4, 1867, and was married May 2, 1894, to Lillian Lepper, who was born March 14, 1867. GEORGE W. BRANHAM

George W., son of John and Frances (Vawter) Branham, was born December 8, 1812, in Scott county, Kentucky.

A portion of a sketch of his life given in a Kansas City paper is here reproduced.

"Major George W. Branham was always an energetic and enterprising man and always took part in the public movements of the community in which he lived. He was a contractor in 1846 and 1847 on the Madison and Indianapolis railroad, the first railroad constructed west of the Alleghany Mountains. He was at the same time a contractor on the Wabash Canal in Indiana. Both of these undertakings were being completed by the state, which, owing to the panic of 1847, failed to carry out its agreements. This caused Major Branham great loss. With that sterling honesty for which he was always distinguished Mr. Branham refused to take advantage of the facilities then existing for effecting settlements with his creditors. He went to work and raised the money and paid his creditors in full.

"The outbreak of the Civil War found him engaged in the management of a large woolen mill at Franklin, Indiana, of which he was the owner. This mill was mysteriously burned, the fire being believed to have been of incendiary origin, because of his intense loyalty. By this fire he lost about $85,000. At that time he was also engaged in the banking business at Franklin and Jeffersonville, being president of the branch located at Franklin, while Hon. Hugh McCulloch was president of the Ft. Wayne branch. This made them both directors of the state bank and brought them into such association that a warm personal attachment ensued and lasted through life. Several times during the administration of Mr. McCulloch as secretary of the treasury, Major Branham was invited to Washington to consider with him intricate financial problems. He organized the National Bank of Franklin soon after the passage of the national bank law, and that was the second bank organized under it.

"In 1865 Major Branham went to Memphis with the idea of organizing a national bank there, but finding it an unpromising place at that time, went up the river and, after looking over the Missouri towns, he located in Kansas City, predicting that it would become a great commercial center. Here he organized a First National Bank in 1866, which in after years became a great factor in the development of Kansas City. He was afterwards a miller, a grain merchant, and for a number of years a prominent and influential member of the Board of Trade and a member of the first board of directors.

"In 1875 Major Branham disposed of his interests in Kansas City and removed to a farm in Linn county, where he died August 1, 1885. He left behind him written instructions concerning his funeral, in which he desired that there should be no religious ceremony; therefore a paper written by himself, and bearing date of the day of his death, was read at the grave by Major Warner, a friend of Major Branham and his family."

Cynthia (Watson) Branham was born at Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, in 1820; died 1903.

In an article published after the death of David Branham, occurred this paragraph :

"David Branham was for more than fifty years identified, either directly or indirectly, with all that was of public interest in Jefferson county, Indiana. He was a member of the legislature for a quarter of a century, and during this entire period there was no act of his that was not dictated by sentiments of highest integrity and purest patriotism. While he was a man of positive views and strong convictions, firmly devoted to his political sentiments and party, his strong sense of justice held them in such just equilibrium as to command for him the confidence and respect, not only of the leaders, but of the people of all parties."

Governor Morton wrote a letter to his private secretary, W. H. H. Terrell, just after he had started to Europe, and in it said: "I am personally thankful for the able and efficient support David Branham has given me through my whole administration and the service he has rendered the state. It was Branham who gave the backbone to the movement in the legislature of 1863 which resulted in the defeat of all their revolutionary schemes and saved the state from the horrors of civil war. I have always intended to declare this to the world in some form and still do, if I am spared to return. It was the high stand he took and the bulldog resolution with which he hung on to it that brought the others round to the policy that would save the state (that was the breaking up of the legislature). His services have never been recognized by the government or the people as they should have been. I have always intended to do him justice. Say to him that I cherish kind, grateful recollections of his personal and political services."

Mrs. Mary Cobb, a daughter of David Branham, says: "This letter was dated November 19, 1865. W. H. H. Terrell was a nephew of my mother. I distinctly remember my father bringing the members who 'bolted' with him to our house at Madison. He was superintendent of the Madison Railroad, and brought them in his private car."

The Striblings went from Virginia to Kentucky, and then to Madison, Indiana, in 1809. Thomas Stribling went to Indiana in 1811. He had a farm of about two hundred acres near Pressburg, Indiana. He was a mechanic as well as a farmer, and put up the first steam mill in Indiana. This was near Pressburg, which is a mile out of North Madison. Thomas Stribling bought a large body of land (4,500 acres) on Duck river, Humphreys county, Tennessee, and gave to a number of his children good farms there. In November, 1853, Thomas Stribling and several of his children—Pleasant, Uriah, Silas, Betty Furgason and husband, Ann Chaille, a widow, and Artemecia Wolf and her husband—went to Tennessee. Silas and Uriah remained there about eight or ten years and then returned to Indiana. Artemecia Wolf and her husband did not stay long. At the time the Stribling family went to Tennessee, land sold from three dollars to five dollars per acre. The same land now sells from fifty dollars to one hundred dollars per acre. The hills there contain iron and vast quantities of hematite. Thomas Stribling was born December 4, 1784, and died March 21, 1857, at his home at Honey Point, five miles from the mouth of Duck river, Tennessee.

PHILEMON VAWTER

Philemon Vawter, son of David and Mary (Rucker) Vawter, was born in Culpeper county, Virginia, October 16, 1762. His wife, Anna Vawter (her name being given in her father's old records as Anne), was born in Culpeper county, Virginia, November 14, 1758. She was the daughter of Beverly Vawter, who was the brother of David. They were married about 1779. Soon after their marriage they crossed the mountains to what is now eastern Tennessee. In 1792 they emigrated to Kentucky and settled in Woodford county, near Versailles. Although they were brought up in the Episcopal Church they now united with the Baptist Church. In 1795 they moved to a new home on the bank of the Ohio river in Boone county, Kentucky. They afterwards moved from Boone county, Kentucky, to Trimble county, opposite Madison, Indiana. Philemon Vawter and family moved to Indiana in the year 1808, and entered or bought eighty acres of land where Spring Dale cemetery now is in Madison, Indiana. Philemon Vawter helped build the first house in Madison. His own house, which was a two-story log-house, was located about one mile back from the Ohio river.

Philemon Vawter was a farmer, a chair-maker, a maker of spinning wheels and a Baptist minister. He died April 15, 1814, and was buried near Madison, Indiana, but the body was afterwards removed to the Vawter cemetery, near the home of William Vawter, about three miles from Vernon, Indiana.

Anna Vawter, the wife of Philemon, lived with her daughter Frances for the greater part of her time after she gave up her home. Frances (Vawter) King, a granddaughter of Anna Vawter, tells the following:

"Grandmother lived with father and mother for a long time. Father had been promising grandmother to take her on a visit to Madison. I went with them. We went to visit at Mrs. Vail's. It happened during the first day that we were there, that grandmother was left alone in the sitting-room. She started to go out of the room, made a mistake, went out of the wrong door and fell into the cellar. She was found there a few minutes afterwards. At first she was thought to be dead, but was soon revived. No bones were broken, though she was badly bruised. She would have recovered entirely had it not been that, in her anxiety to wait upon herself, she arose from her bed and, in so doing, slipped, fell and broke her hip bone. From this injury she never recovered.

"We stayed a number of weeks at Mrs. Vail's and were at great expense, as we paid Mrs. Vail twenty-five dollars per week. Grandmother was very anxious to be taken back home. I wrote to father, urging him to send Uncle John for us. Uncle John came, got a wagon, put springs in it and a bed on them, and grandmother on the bed. She was taken in this way to the train. Father was at Vernon with a wagon, the bed of which had been filled with switches to make it springy, and then a bed had been laid on top of that. Grandmother was not hurt at all by the move. She said she believed it did her good. Grandmother lay in this helpless condition for six years before her death. I took care of her during the most of that time. It seemed that no one else pleased her as well. I slept on a little bed by her side and awoke at her lightest whisper."

Anna Vawter died July 21, 1845, and was buried in the Vawter cemetery near North Vernon, Indiana.

Children of Philemon and Anna Vawter were: Richard, Elliott, Frances, Jesse, Beverly, Lucy, Nancy, Elizabeth and David.

RICHARD VAWTER

Richard Vawter, son of Philemon and Anna Vawter, was born, probably, in Culpeper county, Virginia, September 19, 1780. His parents came to Kentucky from what is now eastern Tennessee in 1792. They settled in Woodford county, near Versailles.

Richard Vawter lived in Lexington, Kentucky. He was a wheelwright, an elder in the Christian Church, a large land-owner and a public-spirited citizen. He was married July 25, 1802, to Sarah Snelling, of Fredericksburg, Virginia. Richard Vawter was thrown from his buggy by a frightened horse and fell over a ledge of rocks on Main street, Lexington, Kentucky, and died in 1847, a few days after his fall.

Sarah Snelling Vawter was born June 22, 1781, and died about 1851. She belonged to the well-known Snelling family of Virginia, her father and two brothers being in the Revolutionary War.

A granddaughter of Richard Vawter, Miss Annie Mosley, who is now living in St. Louis, Missouri, said: "I remember hearing grandmother talk of grandfather having invented a machine for crushing rock for the turnpikes and what a great saving it would be. When it was brought before the public, however, it was thought it would throw many men out of work who made their living crushing rock, and so it was set aside. Grandfather was a dear old man. I could almost paint his picture from memory. One of Amanda's children and I lived with grandmother until her death, as we were both orphans. I remember grandmother telling me of a young daughter, not more than fifteen years of age, who had died. For many years grandmother didn't know where her son John was. He left home when very young. There were only two daughters living at the time of grandmother's death—Anne and Elizabeth. The old homestead was then broken up and the family Bible was taken by Anne to Laurenceburg, Kentucky. Grandmother's memory has been to me the sweetest thing in life. It is as dear as the day she left me."

Richard Vawter at one time owned a large tract of land, a great deal of which was lost by payment of security debts.

In the records of Fayette county, Kentucky, it appears that Richard Vawter, of Scott county, Kentucky, bought a lot in Lexington, Kentucky, on Water street, in 1814, another in 1820, and another in 1821.

It also appears that John B. Payne, as commissioner of Fayette county, sold a tract of land lying on Water street in Lexington, Kentucky, to settle the estate of Richard Vawter, in 1858.

The heirs of Richard Vawter, as shown by the above settlement, were Edward Harris and Elizabeth Harris, James Smith and Ann Smith, James McDaniel, John Smith and Sarah Smith, Esther Vawter, single; Ann Mosley, granddaughter, and Richard and Fanny Vaughn, grandchildren.

The last of the recorded transactions of Richard Vawter was in 1846.

LUCY (VAWTER) CRAWFORD

Lucy Vawter, daughter of Philemon and Anna Vawter, was born in Shelby county, Kentucky, in 1792, and died in Bartholomew county, Indiana, about 1832. She was married in 1812 to James Maxwell Crawford (son of James Crawford), who was born in Jared county, Kentucky, March 3, 1790, and died at Hartsville, Indiana, October 13, 1856. James Maxwell Crawford was married, second, to Mrs. Susan Lanning, and third, to Mrs. Frances Wooden.

Children of James and Lucy (Vawter) Crawford were: Ann, who died young, Philemon Vawter, Robert, who died at the age of fourteen, Rebecca, Rachel and five other daughters who died young.

1. Philemon Vawter Crawford, son of James M. and Lucy (Vawter) Crawford, was born near Madison, Indiana, September 24, 1814; married in December, 1833, to Letitia S. Smith, daughter of Henry and Margaret Smith, of Smyrna township, Jefferson county, Indiana.

Letitia (Smith) Crawford was born August 28, 1817; died in Crawfordsville, Oregon, June 13, 1896. Philemon Vawter Crawford died at Eugene, Oregon, February 1, 1901.

LIFE SKETCH OF PHILEMON VAWTER CRAWFORD

(Written by himself in 1882)

James Crawford, my grandfather on my father's side, was born in 1759 and reared on or near James River, Virginia, and at the age of sixteen years volunteered in what was known as the Virginia line and served three years in the Revolutionary War. He afterward—date unknown to me—married Rebecca Anderson, and they reared eight children, three sons and five daughters. My father, James Maxwell Crawford, was the third son, and was born March 3, 1790, in Jared county, Kentucky, where my grandfather had removed among the first settlers of that region, and where they had many bloody encounters with the savages, my grandfather having a full share in the troubles.

But to hasten the story: My grandfather again moved, from Jared county, Kentucky, to Jefferson county, Indiana, in March, 1811, when my father was twenty-one years of age, and settled within three miles of where the city of Madison now stands.

My grandfather, Philemon Vawter, was also born in Virginia, and served in the Revolutionary War. He was an orphan boy, married his cousin Anna Vawter, and emigrated to Kentucky in early times and bore a full share in the Indian troubles. They reared ten children*—five boys and five girls—my mother being the second daughter. They moved from Kentucky to Jefferson county, Indiana, in the year 1810, and settled where a portion of the city of Madison now stands. My father and mother were married early in the year 1812, and reared ten children—eight girls and two boys—the oldest a girl, myself the next. I was born September 24, 1814.

*Mr. Crawford is mistaken here, as Philemon Vawter, according to his own record, had nine children.

This genealogy is given from memory, but I believe correct so far as given.

My grandfather Crawford and family belonged to the Presbyterian Church, but renounced their creed under the reformation of Barton W. Stone, my father being the only one who did not unite with the Christian Church. Being of an excitable temperament, he finally drifted into the Methodist Church.

My grandfather Vawter was a Baptist preacher, and his family were all members of that order except my mother and two of her brothers, who adopted the early reformation under B. W. Stone. The two brothers, Richard and Beverly, became Christian preachers.

When I advanced far enough in my early education to read, the Bible was our common school book, and in the New Testament I got my first lessons in Christianity, and those early lessons and impressions have shaped my course through life. At the age of fourteen years, already being a firm believer, I concluded that if I ever expected to appear in the likeness of Christ's resurrection I must first appear in the likeness of his death; accordingly I was buried with Christ in baptism and arose to walk in newness of life, which I have aimed to do ever since; but like all other men I have had my share of trials and temptations. I was a member of some three congregations at different times in Jefferson county, Indiana, the most of the time officiating as elder or deacon, and have acted in the capacity of elder for a time in Oregon.

Having a desire to see more of the world than I had seen, and becoming favorably impressed with the descriptions of Oregon, I sold out my little estate in Indiana in the winter of 1850-51, and left Madison on the 28th day of March, 1851, for Oregon. Myself and family, and several other families with whom we traveled, came by water from Madison to St. Joseph, Missouri, where we fitted up teams and started overland for the far west on the first day of May, 1851.

My family at that time consisted of myself, wife and five children—the oldest fourteen, the youngest four years of age. We made the long and tedious journey of twenty-two hundred miles with an ox team in just one hundred and fifty-two days. When we arrived in Oregon we found the Willamette valley more than we had looked for, and all we could desire, and we are yet, after twenty-nine years residence here, satisfied that there is no more favored spot on the earth.

The generation in which I have lived is one that will form an important chapter in the world's history. The application of steam was in its infancy when I was in mine. Electricity was known to exist, but only as a useless principle in nature. Our harvests were then cut with the simplest hand tools only. Man power then supplied what steam, water and horse power now performs. Monopolies were then almost unknown, now they threaten to rule the nation. Human slavery then shaped and controlled Southern politics. For its final overthrow and the humiliation of its votaries a gigantic rebellion has been inaugurated and conquered at an enormous expense to the nation in blood and treasure. And yet we are a great, free and prosperous nation, notwithstanding the curse of a four years' war and the tyranny of capital. I have witnessed all this during my short space of time here.

I enjoyed the morning of life. I witnessed the gathering storm of rebellion; I have seen it pass over, with all of its terrors, and now in the evening of life all is smooth and calm again. I have realized all I desired with regard to African slavery, and if I could realize as much on the temperance question I would feel ready to depart and go to where my treasure is laid up, with full assurance of my reward.

LETTER FROM RACHEL (CRAWFORD) SMITH TO WILLIAM AND FRANCES VAWTER, WRITTEN ABOUT 1852

Dear Uncle and Aunt:

I take this opportunity to write you a few lines to acknowledge the reception of your letter, which came last Monday. We had heard of the death of Cousin Mary and Anna, but not of the death of Polly's babe. Cordelia died before we left. I was struck with surprise to hear of father's marriage. He must be in his dotage. He has got a fine woman. What changeable creatures we all are! I was sorry to hear of the house getting burned, but was glad to hear that Ormand's prejudice against Oregon had frozen to death and that he had also an idea of trying to come to this country. I do think that if he and David were here they could live much easier than where they are. I think that I have as great a desire for the welfare and prosperity of my relatives as anybody, but I would advise them unless they can have a good supply of good, strong clothing, a well-built, light two-horse wagon, and at the least calculation, four hundred dollars when landed at St. Joe, not to undertake the journey, unless they come as one family, or unless the prices of provisions and cattle are lower than when we left. But Oregon is ever worth coming to, and if they can not make up an outfit next year, let them not get discouraged.

An old acquaintance of Mr. Smith's who could not live at all below Madison, moved to Missouri, raised his own team and provisions and came through in '47. He is now quite wealthy; so I would advise, if they ever expect to get able to come, to get out of that place and get to some good cattle country, where they may soon raise their own outfit and may be able to come independently.

What have you done with Achilles and Philemon? You spoke of all the rest in your letter. Where is Sarah Jane and Aunt Nancy? I have not forgotten one of them. Mr. Smith says, consider the interest of your sons and let them come to Oregon, where they can be of a great deal more benefit to themselves and to the community than where they are.

I have not heard preaching since I left Madison. They have preaching at T. Stott's and at T. Denny's and at Portland, but for want of a road I would be too late, as I would have to go so far around. I know of no Baptist Church nearer than Oregon City. There, I have understood, they have a band of musicians (wicked men) hired to sing for the church. If this be the case, I would like to know who expects to stand accountable for the lay members not doing their duty, the choir or their employers?

We are all well at present. Philemon and two of the children have had the ague, but they are well now. They live about ten miles from us.

We learn that it has been somewhat sickly on the road this year, grass being very scarce, though vegetables are good.

I must draw to a close. I hope you will all remember the vow you made me when we took the parting hand. Give my love to all that wish to hear from us. Write soon.

RACHEL AND PETER SMITH.

TO WILLIAM AND FRANCES VAWTER.

DAVID VAWTER

David Vawter, the youngest son of Philemon and Anna Vawter, was born in Kentucky, January 21, 1800; married April 23, 1823, to Lucinda Glover, the sister of James Glover, who married David's sister Elizabeth.

David Vawter traded down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, running to Natchez and New Orleans. In 1832 he built his first steamboat, the "Bravo." It ran between Natchitoches, Louisiana, on the Red river, and Natchez or New Orleans, as the freight paid best; but gradually Natchez was left out. He afterwards owned a number of steamboats running on the Mississippi and as high up the Red river as they could go. When he gave up the steamboat business he sold his Red river home and removed to Texas in May, 1844, where he bought a large tract of land.

David Vawter died July 13, 1845. Lucinda (Glover) Vawter was born July 8, 1805, and died December 20, 1857.

Vawter and family lived at Grand Bluff, Panola county, Texas, for many years after his marriage in the old home of his father, which was burned in 1865. While he lived in the Bandera Mountains, forty miles west of San Antonio, he, for years, amid drought and Mormon opposition and persecution, carried on a Sabbath-school, which was at times the only religious service held in that part of the country.

George Lewis Vawter, a son, says that he does not think an account of their family would be complete without the mention of "Uncle Allen," the old negro slave, who ran the Grand Bluff ferry boat for fifteen years as a slave and many years as a free man. On account of debt, his father and mother and himself were afraid of being sold apart, and so his mother sent him to Lewis Vawter to see if he wouldn't buy them for the David Vawter estate. This he did, and thus "Uncle Allen," "Aunt Lydie" and "Uncle Dick" came into the family. "They helped in the care of my mother's family," said G. L. Vawter, "but it was in the contract of sale that 'Aunt Lydie' was never to have to 'wash clothes.' "

RUSSELL VAWTER

Russell Vawter was born June 22, 1755, and lived in Culpeper county, Virginia. It is not known who was the father of Russell, but he was probably a son of a brother of David, the son of John. David Vawter was born in 1720, and one of his sons, Jesse, was born in the same year as Russell. It is reasonably certain that they were closely related, as they both lived in the same county in Virginia and the same family names run through both families—such names as Elliott and Beverly.

Jesse Vawter, the son of David, in his account of the journey westward, speaks of one Joseph Early. One of Russell Vawter's children is named Joseph Early, probably for this same man.

Russell Vawter was married to Mary Sparks, who was born September 17, 1757.

Edward Vawter, the first, built a church in Essex county, in 1731, which is still standing and in use. It is called "Vauter's Church." An account of it taken from "Old Churches, Ministers and Families of Virginia," by W. Meade, is as follows:

"Upon a branch of Blackburn's Creek called Church Swamp stands Vauter's Church, built, as indicated by a date inscribed upon its walls, in 1731. This church is in a good state of preservation. Mrs. Lewis, who is descended from the Pendletons and Gaines of Culpeper, the Vauters of Essex and the Ruckers, says: 'There were two churches, the brick and the South Church, which was about sixteen miles distant and four miles below the present site of the Madison court-house. It was a frame building and stood on the land of Richard Vauter. Both buildings were old at the commencement of the Revolutionary War. The Episcopal families around these churches were the Ruckers, the Barbours, Beales, Keastleys, Lewis and Vauters.'"

Thomas Vawter, son of Edward, the first, was born in 1750. He had a son, Edward, born in 1775. This son Edward had a daughter Elizabeth, who married her cousin Thomas Vawter. Thomas and Elizabeth Vawter were the ancestors of Mrs. Egbert Jones, Holly Springs, Mississippi.

MADISON AND VICINITY A HUNDRED YEARS AGO

It might perhaps be interesting to know something of Madison, the conditions of the surrounding country and the customs at the time the Vawters first came to Indiana. The history of all the Vawters descended from Jesse and many of those descended from Philemon has, in the past, if not now, been intimately connected with the history of Madison itself. In a Madison paper there appeared many years ago a series of interviews with the early pioneers of Jefferson county. One of these is with James Burns, the father of Maxa Burns, who married Maria Vawter. This article is here given as it was written:

JAMES BURNS

"James Burns, one of the oldest and most intelligent of our early settlers, is living on Second street, in the extreme western part of Madison. He is the father of ex-Mayor Miles S. Burns. Mr. Burns was born in Loudoun county, Virginia, near Alexandria, in 1786. He moved to Kentucky, traveling in a wagon, in the year 1794. Mason and Bracken counties were his stopping places until 1806, when, accompanied by a young wife he had lately married, he removed again into Ohio. In December, 1806, Burns entered Fort Washington for the first time. The fort and surrounding village had not yet received its present name—Cincinnati. The tract of land back from the river was called Hobson's Choice, the rest, facing the river, Fort Washington. The houses were few and scattered here and there in the woods and clearings. Mr. Burns rented a farm and lived upon it. He was enrolled in the militia and saw extensive service against the Ohio Indians. When Aaron Burr came west and fled southward for New Orleans, Burns was among the militia who kept guard along the river at Cincinnati to intercept and capture him. The wily

Burr, however, evaded the authorities and passed south without detection. Burns came to Madison in 1814, the Indians being then at war with the settlers. James Hartsock, John Burns and James Burns together purchased a boat at Cincinnati in which to bring themselves, their families and household possessions to Madison. The boat was about one hundred feet long and roofed over. Three days were occupied in floating down to Madison. 'We landed,' says Mr. Burns, 'opposite the big frame house that old John McIntire put up. It is the same house that John Marsh now lives in, though it has been remodeled several times. Main street at that time—1814—was the only street in the town. Main Cross was laid out only a little way down toward Mulberry. A person had to drive around logs and trees to go anywhere. The timber was cut down to make a show but was not cut up or hauled away. There were eight or ten families in the town, not more. The bottom was almost entirely covered with woods, only a little spot cleared for houses. Burnett's public house stood on Main Cross, close to where the old Indiana Bank is now. On Main street, was John Booth's tavern, a hewed log house on the east side of Main, below our court-house. A man named Wilson had a cabinet shop near the tavern. Colonel Paul lived in a brick house near the river bank, the only brick house in the town then. Three or four lawyers were boarding with him, William Hendricks, Cristopher Harrison, the government surveyor, and others. Soon after I came, Harrison was elected to congress. This was before he was married. Basil Bentley, the first sheriff of this county, also boarded with Colonel Paul. I took dinner shortly after I came to town with Colonel Paul and saw them all. Old Wagner, Ike Wagner's father, had a blacksmith shop between Main and Mulberry, on High street. John McIntire kept a dry-goods store in his big frame house. Colonel Paul had a mill back and above the present burying ground on Crooked Creek. The mill was up and had just got to grinding corn when I came. It was run by water power. Dawson Blackmore lived on the corner of Walnut and High, in a one-story hewed log house. He had three sons and two daughters. Dawson Blackmore, Jr., was the first white male child born in Madison.

Betty Strickland, a daughter of Judge Strickland, who lived beyond Blackmore's on Walnut street, was the first girl baby born about here. The Vawters were here and a few others besides, when our party landed.

"As we went up town from the boat we found everybody sitting around watching for Indians, afraid to go out of the house almost. A man named Jim Moore invited us to his house to stay a few days, and we went. After taking our families to Moore's, Hartsock and myself took our guns and went to Wirt, then a fort or blockhouse. We passed the blockhouse at old James Edwards' mill on Clifty Creek. When we got out to the other blockhouse on Harbert's Creek the people ran out and closed the gate, thinking we were Indians. They made us stand off and hello a good deal before they let us in. After the gate was opened they stood staring and gaping to see whether we were all right or not. I examined the land I had bought that day and the next morning we got horses and returned to Madison. I then hired a team and hauled out two or three loads of furniture and things. Next we sold the boat to John and Jim Cowden. Our three families moved out to Harbert's blockhouse together. The first night we camped by a big log on old Jesse Vawter's place. We slept on the ground before a log fire near the blockhouse.

"We located on Harbert's Creek, on the site of the village of Wirt, six miles from Madison. Five families were living in the blockhouse at this time; our party adding three more. William Harbert, the first settler, after whom the creek took its name, who went out and built a cabin in 1811, before the war began, was there with his family. Daniel Hickman, John Brock, Samuel Chasteen, William West and their families were the others. We all lived in the blockhouse and were in continual fear of the Indians. Every night we kept guard, and Judge Dunn passed once or twice every week with his rangers. The Indians came in sight frequently, threatening us. Several persons that had wandered off in the woods hunting disappeared and were never afterwards heard of, no doubt having been murdered or carried away by the Indians. The blockhouse stood about fifteen rods east of my late residence at Wirt. The site of the fort is now a part of the farm of Hiram Francisco.

“The blockhouse was a square inclosing about one-half an acre. In each of the four corners were log houses built unusually strong. The upper part hung over on the outside to prevent the Indians climbing up on the roof, and all the sides were pierced with port-holes. There were other houses close up to the picket walls, which served to strengthen the pickets. The picket was a fence of high, heavy posts driven into the ground and sharpened on the ends. There was a gate on the north side of the fort, and one on the east. Inside the fort was a hollow square, all the houses being close up to the walls. The families that lived there had built cabins on their land when they first made the settlement, all of them from a half-mile to three or four miles distant from Harbert's. When the Indians came they were afraid to be separated so far from each other, so the blockhouse was built. The location was a first rate one. It was on the high bank just south of the creek. The land on the east and west sides sloped down a little lower than where the fort was. A fine large spring was near the fort, too.

“In those days we all dressed in buckskin breeches and hunting shirts. We never went out without our guns ready for an encounter with the Indians or wild animals. The woods were so full of game that the rangers shot all they had to eat. If they didn't shoot the game they had to go without. This country belonged to old Captain White-Eyes and his brood. White-Eyes pretended to be a big chief and friendly to the whites, but there was no dependence in him. He was a bold-looking jockey, rather sassy, about thirty years old and not short of six feet in height. He wore the Indian garb—breech clout, leggins and moccasins, with a blanket thrown over his shoulders. His leggins were of dark blue or black woolen cloth, pretty fine, too. Indians were particular about cloth, they knew what was good and wouldn't buy it if it wasn't. His hair was long and black and had buzzard's quills stuck around in it. He always carried a gun and a tomahawk. His tomahawk was made with a pipe in the pole. He was the biggest Indian in his tribe, the Pottawattomies. The tribe came from out on the Wabash. There were well onto a hundred with White-Eyes.

"These Indians had a camp on Marble Creek, close to Hillis' blockhouse. It was in Lancaster township on Stout's farm. The camp was on a little knoll. All about it the bark was pulled off the trees and set on end for shelter. Trees were peeled as high as they could reach and for a good bit around, as they had about fifteen wigwams. Indians wouldn't go into a house and sit down in a chair to eat from a table—they'd get down on their knees around the table and take things off the plates with their hands. They mostly ate meat. I've seen Indians eating meat off one end of a chunk and a dog biting and chewing at the other. They thought as much of their dogs as they did of themselves. In the logs and stumps about the camp you'd see little holes hollowed out where they put their corn and pounded it with their tomahawks. They had a good many ponies which they used in packing their things from place to place. Every man carried his rifle and hunting gear. Old White-Eyes rode generally. The squaws wrapped a lot of stuff, sometimes a bushel or two of corn, in a blanket and swung it on their backs, having the ends tied and pressing against their foreheads. The Indians were accustomed to come here to trade and never got away without being pretty well melted with liquor. They always had a jug.

"The Indians were good marksmen. They shot with rifle and bow and arrow. One time, when thirty or forty of White-Eyes' men were passing through my place I coaxed one of them into my stable to see a bay mare the Indians had stolen once. The mare hated the sight of an Indian. She'd begin to plunge and kick the moment she saw one. Before he got fairly in the stable the mare squealed and kicked at him. The Indian broke and ran, saying, "She's no good horse, no good horse."

"Madison was owned originally by Paul, Burnet, Davis and Lyon. Burnet lived in Cincinnati, Davis some place in Ohio, and Lyon at Eagle Hollow. Davis and Burnet came in after the first sale of lots by Paul and Lyon in 1811. Jefferson county extended to the Indian country and was called Jackson's purchase. The first steamboat that passed this point was the Robert Fulton. I think she passed here in 1815 or 1816. The first boat I was ever on was the Hibernia. I went to Cincinnati on her from this place in 1817 or 1818. The boat was not running regularly between any points.

“Wirt was laid out by Colonel Arion, James Vawter and myself. I proposed Wyandotte as the name of the place. Colonel Arion suggested Wirt, after William Wirt, of Virginia, and so it got that name. The Baptists (Iron Jackets) organized a church at Wirt in February, 1818. The meeting was held in the log school-house. The members were William West and wife, William Harbert and wife, John Burns and wife, James Burns and wife, Robert Harbert, a single man, a young woman named Rebecca Marshall, John Stevens, Wilson Moncrief, Abner Moncrief, James Harbert, Thomas Glover and Rachel Johnson. Daniel Stogsdill, the preacher, was from Pulaski county, Kentucky. Church was held in the school-house for nine years. Then a little brick house was built. The present church is almost exactly on the same site as the first one, just a small distance east of the old one. The first baptism recorded by the church was in June, 1825. The first school-house was built pretty near the present church. It was started in 1819. The teacher was a Scotchman named Carmichael, who boarded at my house. The first mill-dam ever built on Big Creek was made by James Hayes. It was in Lancaster township, and is now the property of John B. Craft. It was formerly owned by Horace Byfield. The dam is there yet. I had my wheat and corn ground there for three or four years.”

Among the early settlers of Madison, Indiana, were Robert Cotton, one of the first officers of Jefferson county, Howard Watts, a leading doctor, Shadrick Wilber, a merchant, John H. Wagner, a blacksmith, William Watlington, a farmer and Philemon Vawter, who came to Madison in 1808.

JOHN H. WAGONER

“John H. Wagner and family, consisting of three sons, Samuel, Lewis and George, and four daughters, Jane, Betsy, Katy and Phoebe, disembarked from a flatboat on the first day of May, 1808, at a point on the Ohio river where the town of Madison was afterwards located. At this date not a cabin of any kind was built in the bottoms at this place, excepting one which was built and occupied by a man by the name of Booth. This was in the upper portion of the bottom, where Isom Ross afterward located and operated his tan-yard.

"J. H. Wagner came from Pennsylvania, and was of the old German stock of that state. He was a blacksmith by trade and brought a portion of his tools with him. After transferring his tools and what few household effects there were to the second bottom, the camp was located at a point on the bluff near where John T. Schofield's residence now stands—the northwest corner of Jefferson and High streets.

"The smoke from the camp-fire attracted the attention of Jesse Vawter, who had landed at this place some two years before, but had located on top of the hill near where the Michigan roads now runs. When Mr. Vawter saw the smoke curling up through the tree tops from the camp in the bottom below he at once set out to visit the camp and learn who the new settlers were. In those days neighbors were so few and far between that it was a genuine pleasure to look into the face of a stranger, if a white man, whether he was traveling through the country or seeking a home. Mr. Vawter gave Mr. Wagner and his family a hearty welcome, and when he saw the blacksmith tools he was rejoiced to know that they were to have a blacksmith among them, for in those days the settlers were in greater need of the handiwork of this trade than that of any other one occupation. After assisting in raising their tent and in making things as comfortable as was possible under the surrounding conditions, Mr. Vawter departed for his home on the hill top, but not before giving Mr. Wagner to understand that he would be glad to assist him in any way he could in starting his new home.

"In a short time Mr. Wagner had a log house built on the site of his camp and a blacksmith shop nearby. After a time his house served as a tavern or stopping place for the travelers to and from Kentucky and the settlements back from the river.

These two buildings were the first erected in what was afterwards the old town of Madison."

WILLIAM WATLINGTON

"In the early part of the year 1814 William Watlington, of Bridgetown, New Jersey, landed at a point on the Ohio River where Madison now is. At that time it was an almost unbroken forest, as only two or three log houses were to be found in the bottom, the early settlers having located on the hill-tops and high rolling lands back from the river.

"William Watlington entered one hundred and sixty acres from the government, five miles north of the river on an Indian trail leading from the river to Graham Creek. The Graham Road was afterwards located along this trail. During the summer Mr. Watlington built two log cabins on his claim. One of the cabins he fitted up for himself, the other being built for John Bramwell and his family, whom he had employed to care for his cows and other property while he should be away. In the fall of the same year he returned to New Jersey, and the following spring, 1815, with his wife he again returned to Indiana. During the summer of 1815 he made a trip by flatboat to New Orleans. He returned, chiefly on foot, and contracted a fever, dying shortly after reaching his home in Indiana, on October 15, 1815."

JOHN SMOCK

"John Smock, in talking of the early times, said: 'For a few years after coming to Indiana the early settlers had to go to Kentucky for provisions or to Work's mill in Clark county, near Charlestown. It was not long until Mr. Edwards built a mill on Clifty Creek, just above where the road now crosses the creek.

"'The first fruit trees were brought to the neighborhood of Madison by Samuel Smock and Peter Veneleane. The first mill was a hand-mill. The neighbors would come there with their corn and would take turns in grinding it. The sheep were penned every night to keep them from the wolves. To exterminate the wolves the settlers built pens to trap them. The pens were built of logs, generally split logs. The top was so heavy a wolf could not raise it. It was constructed with a trigger to which a piece of meat was fastened. The trigger was attached to a pole which held the lid or top of the pen up. When the wolf got into the pen and pulled the meat the trap fell and Mr. Wolf was caught and killed, and $2 received for his scalp, which was the legal price for both ears.

“The people were more social then than they are now. The men frequently went ten or twelve miles to help one another raise cabins. The young women would go to visit at each other's houses in numbers. It made no difference if it happened to be wash-day. They all helped, and merriment and work went on together.

“The grass, generally called broom sage, is a native of North Carolina. It was brought to Madison by a family by the name of White. They thought that they were going to a new country—a wilderness where they could get nothing to sweep with, so the woman tied a few bunches carefully together and brought them along. That carried the seed here. The farmers know to their sorrow how it will spread.’”

ANDREW DINWIDDIE

“Andrew Dinwiddie said that his father came to Jefferson county first in 1807, but, because the Indians proved so troublesome, he returned to Kentucky at the end of a year. He came back to Hanover township in 1809. He said: ‘Father settled one mile northwest of Hanover. The settlers in the vicinity met one day and built a fort on his place for protection against the Indians. Below this fort an old weaver by the name of West had put up a small cabin. He provided a way of escape from the Indians, in case they attacked him suddenly at night or surprised him during the day and got between his cabin and the fort. Underneath his puncheon floor he dug a hole and excavated the earth for some distance making a tunnel through which he could crawl to a bushy place in the woods near by. Coming out of this tunnel unobserved by his enemies, an escape to the fort would not have been difficult.

“After the Pigeon Roost massacre we had no further trouble with hostile Indians. The friendly ones, however, were continually prowling around doing all the mischief in their power. The Indians frequently cut across our land when out hunting. One day a party of eight or ten came along, and all were drunk but one. Old White-Eyes was with them. They had not gone far before I heard a crash, and looking around I saw that one Indian had fallen off his horse and was sprawling on the ground with his five or six guns scattered about him. The sober one of the party spent some time trying to get him mounted, but before his task was accomplished quite a crowd of spectators had assembled who enjoyed the fun very much.

“Shortly after this old White-Eyes entered a house and found a woman making soap. By threatening her, he compelled her to drink a half-pint of strong lye and then left. Her husband returned in a few moments and gave her an emetic which relieved her sufferings. Then the husband gathered together two or three men and went in search of the Indian intending to kill him, but failed to find him. Shortly afterwards, White-Eyes turned up in Scott county, to the terror of all the inhabitants. Old Doctor Hicks, thinking to rid them of him, gave him poison in whisky, but gave him too much, and, instead of having the desired effect, it acted as an emetic. White-Eyes did not appreciate such hospitality and left for parts unknown.”

THOMAS ROSEBERRY

“Thomas Roseberry, of Graham township, said: ‘When my father built a double-hewed log house in 1812 it was necessary to go as far as the Ohio River to obtain help to raise it. The settlers were three days getting it up and drank fifteen gallons of whisky while at it. Without the whisky they could not have raised it at all. The old house is standing yet (about 1850), with all the port-holes through which watch was kept, oftentimes night and day. My brothers Thomas, John and George would stand sentry alternately. George was the youngest and would say: "Oh, I'm so tired. I don't think any 'Injuns' will come to-night." When the Pigeon Roost massacre occurred the settlers were terror-stricken and went to the blockhouse on the farm of George Campbell. During these alarming times the farmers guarded the women with guns in hand while the cows were being milked. Guns were also carried on plows while plowing the ground. Old White-Eyes visited our folks sometimes, after the massacre, and pretended to be friendly. He always had an aversion to white babies, and he said that all those whose heads were not shaped to suit him ought to be tomahawked.' "

HIRAM PRATHER

"Colonel Hiram Prather, of Jennings county, in speaking of the Indians, said: 'The Indians were encamped on the south fork of the Muscukutuck Creek; their camps extending several miles up the creek. They were under the direct control of Captains White-Eyes and Big-John. Bill Kilbuck seemed to be their chief. He was half white, could read and write, and was the son of old Kilbuck, who was killed by Captain Collins near the Pigeon Roost Settlement the evening before the massacre. These Indians were Delawares and Potawatomies. In the spring of 1817 they left their camp and by hundreds passed our cabin going west. They used to trade with our folks, selling baskets, dressed skins, bead work, etc.' "

JAMES E. LEWIS

"James E. Lewis said: 'The old market-house in Madison was built by setting four posts with a fork in the upper end and poles laid in them. It was then covered with clapboards, with logs to hold them on. The house used as a court-house stood where V. Firth's house now stands. The court was held in the upper room. The stairs was on the outside. The jail was hard to beat. It was a house with a house built on the outside so close that nothing could be moved, as the outside held everything in its place. David Kent was jailor.

“It was hard to make change in these times, as money was scarce. The old Spanish dollar was universally used. Half-dollars and twenty-five-cent pieces, bits and fips (twelve and one-half and six and one-quarter cents). Ten-cent pieces passed for twelve and one-half or eight for a dollar. In 1831 or 1832, when Mr. Jesse Whitehead opened store, he used to bring out a keg full of ten and five cent pieces and make change for any one wanting it. He gave eight dimes and sixteen five cent pieces for a dollar. The pieces were soon called Jesse and half Jesse. Before this time they used to cut the money to make change. This cut money was called sharpshins.

“It is not to be wondered at if many of our citizens have little learning. In the early days many had to go to school two and three miles, and all the way through the woods, with blazes on the trees to prevent them from getting lost. Such school-houses as we had! One log was left out to light the house, and this in cold weather, too, for we had to work in the summer.

“Whenever there was a night meeting it was held at early candle lighting. At the appointed time the heads of each family would take one or two candles in their hands; some would bring lanterns. If many came the house would be well lighted, and if few came they would have poor lights.

“About this time John Brown and C. B. Lewis went down to the mouth of Crooked Creek to fish. A strange-looking craft soon rounded the point. They immediately concluded it was the Indians, and they dropped everything and ran through the woods and into the town and reported the Indians coming. The citizens went armed to the river and saw the first steamboat that came and landed at Madison.

“The country around Madison was settled before the town itself. The name of Madison was at first Wakefield. Jefferson county and Scott county were formed from Clark county, and were one for some time. Jefferson county was named for Jefferson, then President, and Madison was named for President Madison in 1809 or 1810.

“The town of Madison was bought at the sale at Jeffersonville, where the land-office was located, in 1809, by John Paul, Jonathan Lyon and Lewis Davis, at $6.16 per acre. These were the original proprietors who laid out the town and made the first sale of lots in February, 1810. Colonel John Vawter was present.

“The first newspaper published in Madison was the Western Eagle, published by Seth M. Leavenworth and Wm. Hendricks. Colonel John Vawter told me that this paper was published in his kitchen.

“In 1825 or 1826 David McClure, Sr., lived in what was then called Dorsey's tavern, just west of the First National Bank. He had just gotten two or more cords of wood about five feet long. This was the length in those days, and when cut in two was the proper length for the fire-place. On Christmas eve the stars were bright at ten o'clock, when Samuel David, Jr., Marsh McClure, Jim Collins and Napoleon Collins (afterwards captain in the United States Navy) and Dick Canby (afterwards General Canby) took this wood and built a fence across Main Cross street. The next morning the snow was about a foot deep, and David McClure and his two brothers had to take down the fence and pile up the wood for a Christmas morning frolic. I don't believe David, Sr., has ever forgiven me to this day for that morning's work.”

“At the time when our forefathers first settled in Madison the navigation of the river was of the simplest kind. There were no steamboats then. Broadhorns could float down, but to go up stream the keel-boat was used—a craft something similar to the present canal-boat, but very rude; the guards were about a foot wide and had cleets nailed on the floor. Two or three men on each side with long poles would push it against the current with their shoulders. When the water was deep or rapid the men looked as though they were all lying down. Six miles was considered a good day's run.

“After selecting a site, the first thing for the early settler to do was to erect a log cabin in which to live. The cabin of that day was built as follows: The logs were small and as nearly of a size as possible. Clapboards filled the spaces between the logs and were held in place by wooden pins driven in auger holes in the logs. The floors were of heavy puncheons; the roof of clapboards secured by poles laid across them; the hinges and catches of the door were of wood. In many of them not a nail was used. The bedsteads were made by inserting poles in auger holes in the walls at the proper distance for length and breadth, the other ends of the poles being secured to a corner post. Upon this frame was placed a layer of poles covered with deer skins, and over this a tick filled with leaves." Perhaps many of the women brought with them, as did Elizabeth Vawter, their own feather beds from Virginia or Kentucky.

"After the erection of the cabin, the forest trees had to be removed to make room for a patch of corn and potatoes. All the neighbors helped each other in building, clearing and log rolling. One of the old settlers said that he once hired a man for three months and only had his labor four weeks. Two-thirds of the time he was working on the neighbors' farms.

"The main dependence for clothing," said an early settler of Jennings county, "was a flax lint manufactured into cloth and worn by both men and women. Boots and shoes were costly articles and only enjoyed to any extent by the most favored settlers. Moccasins were the most popular covering for the foot. They were made principally from the deer skin tanned in a wooden trough. The skins of the deer were also used for pants. Hats were made from wool and fur and worn for many years.

"Wild game was abundant, especially wild turkeys. One man caught twelve in traps during a single night. He said: 'We used the deer, bear and turkey for meat. We had more meat than bread, corn-bread and Johnny-cake being all we got generally. We kept a little white flour for company, and were always glad when any came, because then we had biscuits. Venison was not considered such a luxury then. A fine fat buck brought only $1.50. Corn was made into meal by pounding it.'

"Vension hams dried, bear bacon and coon skins, with other peltries, were the trading stock of the times and legal tender for ordinary debts and marriage licenses. Our trading was done at Madison. We carried our flour on pack horses, making the trip from Vernon to Madison and back in three days, staying one night at Grandfather Vawter's and the other at John Badger's on Cap Creek. The first barrel of salt was hauled on a one-horse sled and sold to Samuel Campbell, Joseph Pool and Mr. Prather for $22 in silver.

"We sold corn for twelve and a half cents a bushel, oats for ten cents, potatoes were ten to fifteen cents a bushel, pork a dollar and a half to a dollar seventy-five a barrel, chickens fifty to seventy-five cents a dozen, turkeys ten to twenty-five cents each, milch cows seven dollars. The first market for wheat opened at thirty-seven and a half cents, and remained at that figure for two or three years.

"We paid six bits a pound for coffee, which we only used on Sunday, and six bits a yard for steam-mill cotton goods for shirts. Men in those days worked from sun up to sun down for three bits a day; cleared land in the gum woods for eight dollars an acre; split rails for twenty-five cents per hundred, and reaped wheat for fifty cents a day."

"In 1828 there wasn't such a thing known as a cast stove, and there were no cook stoves until about 1835 or 1836. In 1825 there were no wood saws. The wood was chopped with an ax. Such things as matches were unknown until about 1835, and then they were of the rudest kind. A vial with some kind of preparation in it was necessary, and a stick with sulphur on the end, which, when put into this vial, would ignite. At last, some man invented our present match. At first one had to have a piece of sand paper, and when the matches were rubbed on this paper they would light. These were called 'Locofoco matches.'"
